Heroin addict act ruled valid

We'll wait in case further appeal: Mair

The B.C. Court of Appeal in a unanimous decision today ruled the government's controversial Heroin Treatment Act is valid legislation.

The decision by the court's five judges reverses an earlier Supreme Court ruling by Mr. Justice Allan McEachern who found that the legislation invaded the federal field of criminal law and created a new crime of narcotic dependcy.

The legislation was challenged by civil libertarians in the name of Brenda Ruth Schneider, a former heroin addict who complained of the compulsory nature of the treatment plan under which addicts could be held for three years.

Health Minister Rafe Mair said today the decision may not be not the final outcome.

He said he is concerned that the issue may yet be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada by the minister of justice.

"I'm not going to go ahead with a compulsory program until all areas of appeal are exhausted," Mair said.

The minister said it could be a year or possibly longer before the matter is finally settled.

"We don't want to go ahead (with compulsory treatment) with a sword of Damocles hanging over us," Mair added.

The man who brought in the heroin treatment plan, former health minister Bob McClelland, said he is gratified by the court decision.

McClelland, now minister of energy, said he has consistently defended the program as constitutional.

"We had the best advice from the federal government of the time and the ministers involved that what we were doing was constitutionally within our rights and I'm happy that the Appeal Court now has made that decision as well."

NDP health critic Dennis Cocke (New Westminster) said he hopes the issue will be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada.

"Whether or not it goes to the Supreme Court, I do hope the minister drops the program. It's a disaster," Cocke said.

Justice M.M. McFarlane, who wrote today's Appeal Court judgment, said he concluded that the provisions in the act for examination, apprehension and detention of dependent persons or patients are in no way intended to be punitive.

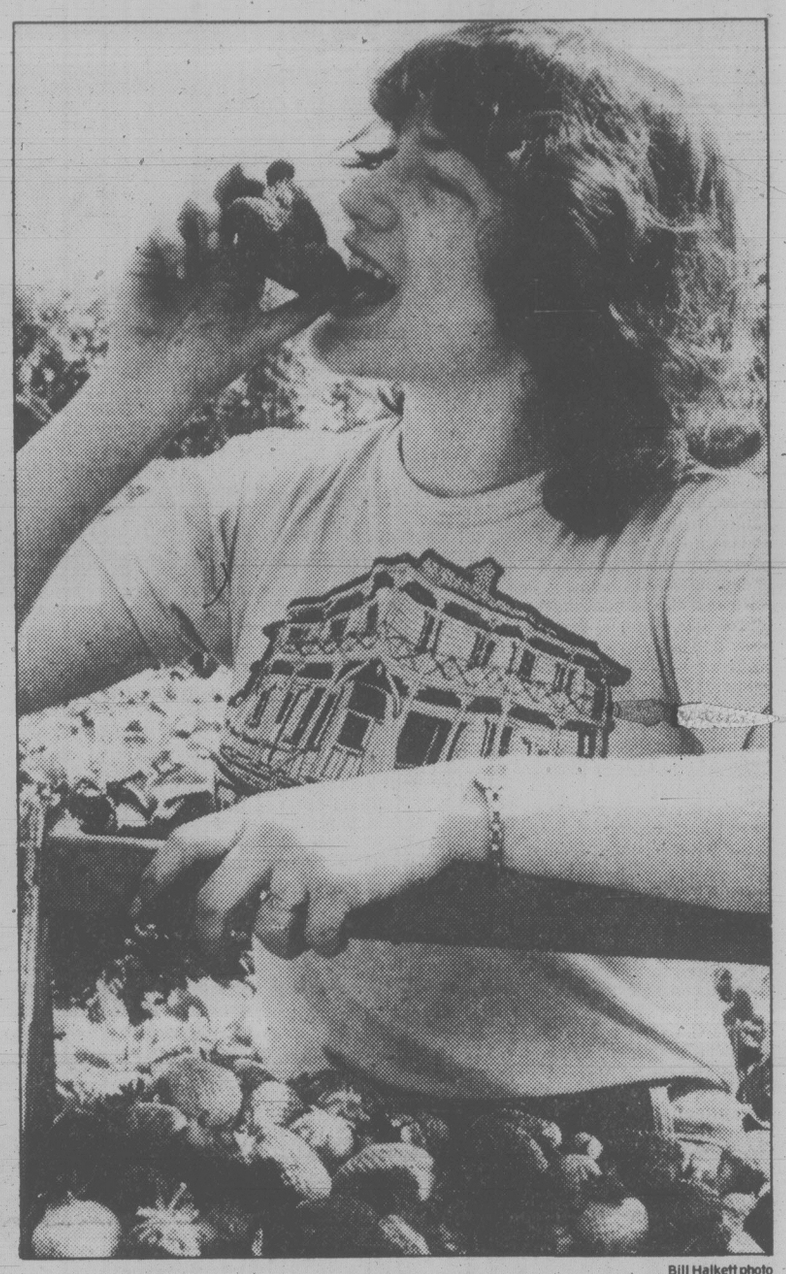

"They are provided for as ancillary to 'treatment' as defined," he said.

"The legislative plan is not to punish users of narcotics.

"It is to provide facilities and other means designed to assist in terminating or diminishing a patient's use of or dependency on the defined narcotic.

"Although there may be occasions when a person will be detained or treated

$1,000,000,000,000 right out of thin air

By WALTER STEWART
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Feeling tired, logy, run-down? Perhaps it comes from holding up a a share of the one trillion dollars — that's $1,000,000,000,000 — in "created" money that is currently hanging over the world's head.

Or, then again, perhaps not.

After all, not too many people know about this inflationary, and enormous, debt-load hanging out there — a little thing like a trillion dollars is easy to overlook in a crowded world — and not everyone who knows is all that excited.

"It's not a subject we really want to get into at this time," one IMF official told FP News. "Too many uncertainties."

He acknowledged that a trillion dollars is about equal to the total dollar holdings of the United States. He also acknowledged that the creation of such a sum reacts on the world economy just as if the U.S. money supply were doubled overnight — which is to say, it gives inflation a hell of a boost. But he wasn't sure the trillion dollar figure was right — "Nobody knows for certain"— so the best thing, he thought, was not to get excited.

This view is widely held among the decent, sober element, which is the same element that kept saying "the economy is fundamentally sound" for the first two years of the Great Depression.

A contrary, and excited, view is taken by Tom Velk, associate professor of money and banking at McGill University, an acknowledged expert on world credit problems.

A bearded, cheerful, outgoing man, Velk sounds merry enough — unusual in economics, the "dismal science" — until he gets onto the subject of how corporations, banks and even governments have become caught up in the business of creating money out of nothing.

Then he sounds like one of the Old Testament prophets, and the can of ginger-beer he waves in his hand might easily be taken for a lightning bolt. Velk says the problems stems from the very nature of banking, because . . .but let him tell it himself:

"When you go to the bank to borrow a million dollars, they don't hand you the money over the counter. They write down your name and put a one and six zeroes beside it. It is the promise to pay that counts, not the bills.

"You can then go out and write cheques, knowing they will be honored. But the bank is severely restricted in the amount of money it can create in this way. It is bound by the amount of reserves it has on hand in its vault. No more reserves, no more money.

"That is how credit controls work — reserve requirements are raised, or the cost of borrowing to replenish reserves is raised.

"But these rules only apply to money denominated in your own currency. There is nothing to stop your bank from giving you a million dollars in yen, or lira, or whatever. There is no limit at all on foreign currencies."

Over the past 15 years, Velk says, banks all over the world, restive under restrictions at home, have fled to the Euro-dollar market, where no controls apply.

Suppose, for example, that you are a car-maker in France, anxious to buy Italian steel to make cars in West Germany. You can go to a Belgian bank and borrow $1 million to buy the steel, having it "denominated" in, say, U.S. funds by the simple device of writing beside the loan: "in U.S. funds."

Commons boycotted over boy

OTTAWA (CP) — Pat Carney, Progressive Conservative MP for Vancouver Centre and the mother of a 15-year-old son, said Thursday she is boycotting the Commons until something it done about the lack of travel allowances for single parents.

"If I were married, I could bring my spouse to Ottawa. I simply want to bring my dependent child, for whom I am totally responsible," Carney said in a press release Thursday.

Commons rules permit spouses of married MPs to travel to Ottawa six times a year. But the Commons committee on members' services refused this week after three months of study to take action on her request the allowance be transferred to her son.

"Since my job is in Ottawa and my child is in Vancouver, it is not clear how I can sit in the House until this matter is resolved," the MP said.

"Since I cannot leave my child on his own in Vancouver, I am returning to my riding to look after him until the committee can agree on a way to reunite us in Ottawa."

Carney said the regulations "make it difficult for the House of Commons to truly represent the Canadian population."

"The House of Commons in no way reflects the real world in terms of sex, age, ethnic origin, income levels or marital status."

Carney said she raised the issue with members of the Commons staff in March and was advised a month later to seek the support of the members' services committee.

"I think three months is a reasonable period of time to deal with a relatively simple issue," Carney said.

She said the cost for her son to travel to Ottawa, at $520 for economy return fare, is prohibitive.

Cheaper charter flight schedules are generally too inflexible to accommodate an MP.

Rail travel is not possible for brief school breaks and regulations for defence flights require that a child be over 16 years of age.

Rival-union clause snags building pact

Contract negotiations covering 45,000 B.C. construction workers have broken down over one key issue.

Both sides are awaiting the outcome of a province-wide strike vote.

Roy Gautier, president of the 17-union B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said management refused to budge on its rejection of the union demand for a common affiliation clause which would allow any of them to stop work if tradesmen not affiliated with the council were working on the same project.

Chuck McVeigh, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association (CLRA), replied the proposal was dangerous because it could lead to walkouts whenever there is an inter-union dispute.

McVeigh said he was confident a contract could be signed within hours if the demand were withdrawn. However, because it has not, the talks have become deadlocked.

The issue would have to be resolved with a yes or a no.

"I don't think there is any room for compromise on this one."

Meanwhile, a wage proposal is on the table that should bring a settlement, if the main issue could be settled, McVeigh said.

The results of the strike vote will not be known until about July 10 when tabulation is completed.

McVeigh, who bargains for about 800 contractors, said he found it frustrating to be within sight of an agreement only to have the talks break down over one issue.

He said the CLRA has tentatively agreed to a clause that would permit union trades workers to walk off if non-union help is hired. Some unions already had that right but now it will be made universal in the building trades with the signing of a new contract.

The remaining question does not involve non-union workers, it has to do with inter-union rivalries.

For example, if a contractor were building a mill for a forest products company and any forestry union workmen became involved, the construction workers could all walk off the job if the CLRA accepted the union's proposal.

They stick up the banks at night with bit of glue

VANCOUVER (CP) — A thief armed with a tube of glue has found a new way to stick up banks — and the result has been to gum up the night deposit system at B.C. branches of the Royal Bank.

A bank spokesman said Thursday envelope night depositories have been sealed at about 100 branches after thieves discovered a method of retrieving customers' deposits.

Several branches of the Toronto-Dominion Bank throughout the province have also been hit by the thief with the glue, but the bank so far has not announced any plans to seal its envelope night depositories.

There have been no cases reported in the Victoria area.

The thief's modus operandi apparently involves gumming up the mechanism that is supposed to drop a deposit out of reach from the outside door.

An envelope deposited when the mechanism has been interfered with in this way will disappear from view, but is still within reach.

Officials of both banks were reluctant to disclose details of the security problem but confirmed that glue was being used to interfere with the depositories.

"Negotiations are under way with the supplier of this equipment to determine the feasibility of design modifications which would correct the present weakness," said Royal Bank spokesman David Laundy.

Losses so far have not been large because they have generally involved small deposits of cash and cheques from individuals and not businesses, he said.

60 years together, they'll wed

The couple, who have nine children, 35 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, got married last month. "This is long enough to live together without getting married," said Mrs. Trohan, 74.

"God makes you for one man and I have him. We're getting old together."

Trohan, 85, said another reason is that the federal veterans affairs department suggested they get married so Mrs. Trohan could apply for a widow's pension if he dies first.

Court fight pays big dividend

VANCOUVER (CP) — A small group of shareholders who rebuffed a takeover bid has been paid a handsome dividend in B.C. Supreme Court.

The 59, representing 2.23 per cent of the shareholding in Whitehorse Copper Mines Ltd., refused an offer of $4 a share from Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd.

They exercised their right under the Canada Business Corporations Act to have a court fix fair value of the shares coveted by the Toronto-based giant.

Chief Justice Allan McEachern, overruling the expert opinions of two Vancouver investment houses, has decided the shares in Whitehorse are worth $6.50 each.

The judgment means the holdout shareholders, whose 76,838 shares were worth $307,352 under Hudbay's $4 offer, have gained an additional $192,095 for a total of $499,447.

McEachern also ruled the dissident shareholders are entitled to costs in the 26-day trial.

In assessing value of the Whitehorse shares at $6.50, the judge overruled valuations of Wood Gundy Ltd. and Richardson Securities of Canada, both of whom said $4 was a fair and reasonable offer.

Noting that Wood Gundy made an $11-million error in calculating Whitehorse's cash flow projection, the judge said he could not place much weight upon the company's opinion.

The chief justice said Richardson Securities did not give enough consideration to potential development of Whitehorse's other properties.

Shareholders who had already accepted the $4 bid don't benefit from the judicial windfall.

Sam Belzberg's family corporation owned 937,980 shares in Whitehorse. At $4 a share, the Vancouver financier sold the family's interest in the Yukon company for a total of $3.7 million.

Had he joined dissident shareholders the Belzbergs could have sold their Whitehorse shares for a total of $6 million.

The events leading to the B.C. Supreme Court decision this week began in May, 1978, when Belzberg, having previously turned down offers of $3 and $3.50 for his Whitehorse shares, accepted the $4 offer.

McEachern noted that the six management directors of Whitehorse, who are also directors or officers of Hudbay, recommended acceptance of the $4 offer.

The three independent directors, including Belzberg, advised shareholders not to accept the offer.

Hudbay, which owned 40 per cent of Whitehorse, acquired Belzberg's 28-per-cent interest and by September, 1978, had picked up additional stock, representing 90.97 per cent of the shares held by others.

After further negotiations, in which 738 of 797 holdout shareholders elected to transfer their shares to Hudbay at $4, the remaining 59 agreed to be paid fair value as determined by the court.

If they try to collect, it will be the day of reckoning

The Belgian bank then has a note on its books that you are good for $1 million, and to offset that, your note promising to repay, with interest, over time. As long as your suppliers will accept the Belgian bank's paper, and as long as you are able to repay, it doesn't matter that the money was created out of thin air.

In theory, U.S. dollars should have to move abroad eventually to cover the note, but Velk says that in practice, that seldom happens. "Even if someone went to your bank and said 'I want this paid off in U.S. dollars,' your Belgian banker would say, 'Sure, but you realize a U.S. note will only pay two per cent, and you realize the Americans send currency inspectors around to check on these deals.'

"The guy will say, 'Oh.'

"Then the Belgian banker will say, 'Why don't I give you a note on the Midlands Bank instead? They pay eight per cent, and the British don't send out inspectors the way the Americans do. The guy will say, 'Yes'. No U.S. funds ever leave home."

Velk estimates, from figures he has obtained from the Bank for International Settlements in Switzerland, that the amount of money created this way in U.S. dollars, Swiss francs, German marks and other favored currencies, comes to about $750 billion — "And that's very conservative."

He estimates that another $200 billion has been created by bank-to-bank notes, again denominated in foreign currencies, as in the transaction outlined above.

Finally, and most dangerously, there is money borrowed by governments from commercial banks. He calls this "the most destabilizing money of them all."

How so?

Because there is no way to collect.

"When North Korea borrowed a billion dollars a couple of years ago, they got it from a consortium of French banks. The banks wrote the notes, North Korea used them to bring in goods from the West, and then simply refused to pay the money back. There was nothing the banks could do."

More and more, Third World governments are going to commercial banks for loans. This is because, when they go to the International Monetary Fund, the IMF imposes economic controls as the price of borrowing, while commercial banks do not, and cannot.

Currently, commercial banks have $60 billion or more — the figure is uncertain — out to governments, from Ghana to Iran, from Greece to Jamaica.

If these governments begin to repudiate the loans entirely — and the danger increases with every passing day — they will threaten the entire fabric of international banking.

Velk points out, "There is no point going to the borrowers and asking them to restrain themselves or they'll bring down the whole house.

"It's not their house."

He suggests that unless the IMF is able to establish reserves on created currency — not likely — or retrieves some of the bad notes and takes them out of circulation — a process that is under way, but slowly — the world is headed for an abrupt reckoning.

"Where it will end," he says, "God knows."

Have a nice day.

Court upholds B.C. heroin act

contrary to that person's desire, the object is nevertheless to treat and assist not to punish."

He said the subject matter of the statute, then, is the establishment, maintenance, management and administration of facilities and institutions for the purpose of diminishing use of or dependency on drugs.

He said the subject matter of the statute cannot be said to be control of narcotics or control and punishment of persons who use or deal in narcotics.

He rejected submissions that the Heroin Treatment Act conflicts with the Federal Narcotics Act.

"Accepting that the Narcotic Control Act was enacted for the peace, order and good government of Canada and that it may or may not also be enacted in relation to the criminal law, the impugned provincial statue, in my opinion, does not conflict with it."

He said it was interesting to note that in the as-yet-unproclaimed Part 2 of the Narcotics Control Act, section 19 contemplates the enactment of provincial legislation designed to provide custody for the treatment of narcotic addicts.

Justice McFarlane continued that it was his opinion that the provincial act in its pith and substance was enacted in relation to classes of subjects listed in Sec. 92(7), (13) and (16) of the British North America Act: the establishment, maintenance and management of hospitals and asylums and other institutions, property, and civil rights in the province, and generally all matters of a merely local or private nature.

He said that the imposition of fine, penalty or imprisonment may be imposed under the Heroin Treatment Act and that the constitutional validity is supported by section 92 (15) of the BNA Act.

Justice McFarlane referred to the admission in evidence at the Supreme Court hearing of a report prepared for the Minister of Health by the Alcohol and Drug Commission and entitled "A plan For the Treatment and Rehabilitation of Heroin Users in British Columbia."

He said the report stresses the relation between the increased abuse and cost of heroin with increased crime; the percentage of robberies; breaking and entering; the social cost of the criminal justice system attributable to drug abuse and the cost of enforcing the Narcotic Control Act.

S. Africa protest rioting spreads

Times News Services

Protests against white-minority rule spread east from Cape Town to the black ghettos around Port Elizabeth, on South Africa's southeast coast, where police wounded two persons in a hail of birdshot and tear gas fired at stone-throwing blacks.

The South African Press Association said the new violence broke out Thursday as sporadic clashes continued in the so-called colored or mixed-race ghettos around Cape Town, the flash point of rioting that has taken as many as 42 lives this week.

Police arrested 40 people and used tear gas to rout about 350 protesters in a clash in the mixed-race township of Ravensmead on the outskirts of Cape Town, SAPA said. The agency quoted police as saying there were no injuries.

Earlier in the day, one car of a train was set afire by demonstrators, halting traffic on the commuter line linking Cape Town with mixed-race ghettos on the Cape Flats, outside the city.

Meanwhile, South Africa's foremost black newsman, Percy Qoboza, today vowed to defy a police ban on journalists entering troubled areas.

In a front page editorial in his newspaper, The Johannesburg Post, Qoboza said he felt "a moral obligation to ignore and defy the ban that has been imposed by the police on my reporters."

Qoboza's pledge came in response to the decision Monday by Police Minister Louis le Grange to ban reporters from the black and Colored townships.

The Cape Town region on South Africa's southwest coast has borne the brunt of the latest round of violence that flared Monday on the fourth anniversary of the 1976 riots that rippled cross-country from the Soweto ghetto outside Johannesburg and left almost 600 blacks dead in eight months of unrest.

Unlike the Soweto riots four years ago, people of mixed race have joined forces with blacks for the first time in a united campaign against the white-minority regime's apartheid policy of racial segregation and its policy of spending more to educate white students than mixed-race or black pupils.

Pyramid man fined $10,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — An American arrested last week by Vancouver police for taking part in a pyramid scheme that appeared in the city recently was fined $10,000 in provincial court Thursday.

Ned DeLancy, 33, of San Jose, Calif., was given the alternative of serving nine months in jail. He was refused time to pay by Judge Gordon Johnston.

In imposing sentence, Judge Johnston said he was levying the fine as a deterrent to others and to discourage get-rich-quick operations moving into the city from other countries.

DeLancy, who pleaded guilty, and another Californian were arrested when police raided a local hotel.

Mugabe moves to crush rebels

SALISBURY (AP) — The Zimbabwe army has been sent to crush a "rebellion" by dissidents in the country's central region, Prime Minister Robert Mugabe said.

"There have been a number of deaths in these areas in the past 10 days," Mugabe said Thursday. The locations cited were in areas controlled by Joshua Nkomo's men during the recently ended seven-year guerrilla war.

Mugabe, in an interview with Argus newspapers aboard a flight to Zaire, said Nkomo supports Mugabe's efforts to crush the dissidents.

Mugabe said that the dissidents are not "ordinary bandits" but are operating on a "definite political pattern leading to revolt."

Earlier this month men from Nkomo's former guerrilla army — now integrated with former Rhodesian regular army units and guerrillas from Mugabe's forces — arrested 400 former comrades who refused to accept the end of the war.

Now you're talkin' taste.

Most of the province was clear overnight but high clouds were drifting over the south coast from another large, slow-moving low pressure system off the coast of Washington. Clouds from this system will continue spreading northeastwards today with some showers developing by this afternoon. This will keep temperatures a little below normal in southern B.C. today. This low will remain to the southwest for the weekend, resulting in generally cloudy skies with some scattered showers.

Setback for prostitution curb

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C.'s highest court has dealt another setback to police efforts to curb prostitution.

The Crown had asked B.C. Court of Appeal to overturn a county court decision which struck down convictions against Karen Elaine Galjot and Danna Leanne Whitter, of Vancouver, both charged with soliciting several men at the same time.

But the appeal court, in a two-to-one decision Thursday, upheld a defence argument that only repeated approaches to one client constitute pressing and persistent behavior.

The Supreme Court of Canada established the term "pressing and persistent" as conditions necessary for a soliciting conviction. The high court used the test in a landmark decision overruling a soliciting conviction in 1978 against Deborah Hutt of Vancouver.

The Crown had considered the most recent trial a test case, holding numerous other cases in abeyance while it was being decided. Crown counsel Al Filmer will study Thursday's ruling.

B.C. deputy attorney general Richard Vogel said his department may appeal the acquittal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Vogel, speaking from Victoria, said that with the dissenting judgment from the Appeal Court it is extremely important the ministry considers an appeal.

He said he expects within two weeks a recommendation from his staff on whether to attempt an appeal.

Evidence during the county court trial was that the women, although they had been busy accosting a series of males, did so reasonably discreetly and by means of the "soft sell" approach.

Mr. Justice E.B. Bull and Mr. Justice H.E. Hutcheon held that eight non-offences do not make one offence. But they indicated things might have turned out differently in court had the women tried the "soft sell" on the same male eight times.

Justice M.M. McFarlane said a trial judge is not obliged to close his mind to a prostitute's prior approach to a series of men "where that conduct is reasonably connected as to time and place with the offence charged." He would have restored the convictions.

Public schools not doing job, Indians say

PENTICTON (CP) — B.C. Indians want to control the education of their children because public schools are not doing the job properly, an Indian spokesman said Wednesday.

"We have spent the last 30 years within the provincial school system and we have only been able to come up with an eight-to-[illegible] per-cent success rate in having our children complete high school," said Chief Philip Paul, vice-president of Indian education with the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs.

"It has become very obvious that the people we have on welfare, in institutions, the people committing suicide, those from broken homes or those on drugs and alcohol are the ones that fit into the 80 to 90 per cent who never complete 12 years of schooling," Paul told an Indian education conference here.

"In terms of our education for the future, we have to determine the needs of those people and where we are going to take them. That's what we are looking at."

He said negotiations with the federal government for [illegible]aster tuition agreement broke down in January.

Mass push for pot

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec branch of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, (NORML-Quebec), plans a mass movement to back the decriminalization of marijuana.

Murder charged

QUESNEL (CP) — Darryl Lorne Thomson, 23, of Quesnel was charged Thursday with second-degree murder after a 28-year-old man was shot to death in this Cariboo community.

Albert Emmanuel Hedberg of Pouce Coupe, B.C. died after he was shot in the chest with a rifle early Thursday.

Strike looms at weekly

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of the Delta Optimist weekly newspaper served 72-hour strike notice Thursday in a bid for a first contract. A Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild official said the employees will be in a legal position to strike Sunday.

Sun worries fire officials

Thursday's sunny skies were eyed with suspicion by officials in the B.C. forests ministry fire protection branch.

A drying trend forecast for the next two days in southern B.C. means more fires from lightning storms, said Geoff Bate, superintendent of fire control.

But he said: "Our lightning detector system, now operational in the southeastern part of the province, is helping us pinpoint areas and fire locations."

Forest fires in B.C. have ravaged an area five times larger than at the same time last year and fighting them has cost more than $5.9 million, compared with only $1.3 million at this time last year.

"If this drying trend continues, we are in trouble," said Bate. "About three weeks ago we were in bad shape but things look better right now [illegible] of fires, we're not looking forward to good weather."

There are currently 301 men fighting 152 fires in the province. Worst-hit areas have been the Prince George and Prince Rupert districts.

To date, 821 fires have burned 43,000 hectares of land, compared with 611 fires burning 8,092 hectares this time last year.

LeBlanc can't order river level hike: Alcan

VANCOUVER (CP) — Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. officials said Thursday federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc cannot order them to increase the level of the Nechako River in north-central B.C.

Fisheries officials say the river's water flow must be doubled to protect this summer's salmon run and LeBlanc has asked the company to do so.

"It is our understanding the minister can request this, and he has done that," said company spokesman Les Holyrod, adding Alcan does not believe LeBlanc has the power to order them to increase the levels.

The aluminum company, which sets water levels depending on the requirements of its Kemano power station, operates under an agreement with the province and reports to B.C. water officials, Holyrod said.

He said fisheries officials are meeting with Alcan in an attempt to reach a compromise.

Fisheries officials maintain that their department can order water levels raised if, as they believe, current levels would affect salmon returning to the river to spawn.

Alcan maintains the current flow level — 500 cubic feet a second — will not harm salmon and the lower level is necessary to maintain hydro-electric output next year.

LeBlanc's parliamentary secretary, George Henderson, said in Ottawa last week that Alcan could be charged under the Fisheries Protection Act if the company doesn't comply with a request to double the water flow back to 1,000 cubic feet a second. No charges have been laid.

Earlier, an Alcan employee said the company is diverting water from the reservoir away from the spillway which returns water to the Nechako river system.

Instead, most of the water goes through the 16-kilometre tunnel which leads to generators at Kemano, the project which fuels the company's aluminum smelter at Kitimat.

The employee, who declined to be identified, said the smelter requires 625 megawatts of power, but the Kemano station can produce 850 megawatts. He said Alcan has been selling the surplus power to B.C. Hydro.

Holroyd confirmed water is being diverted to Kemano and that Alcan has had an agreement for a number of years to sell electricity to Hydro.

However, he refused to discuss recent sales, saying they are private transactions between Alcan and Hydro.

Hydro spokesman John Sexton said the Crown corporation buys an average of 130 megawatts from Alcan. Hydro uses about 70 megawatts of that and exports the remaining 60 megawatts to Washington state.

Holroyd said a low snowpack is the reason spillway water flows have been reduced to 500 cubic feet a second.

An independent comptroller

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis may well be right to restructure his department so that the comptroller-general's office reports through normal ministry channels rather than directly to the minister.

The current system was designed when the comptroller-general was the final and most independent check on the spending of public servants. It was his responsibility to maintain a proper system of checks and balances in government spending, to prevent mis-spending or inappropriate use of taxpayers' dollars.

To do that, he needed a certain amount of independence. It was no use his checking on civil servant spending, if civil servants had the power to control his actions. Thus, the Financial Control Act made him responsible to the minister, rather than to any other civil servant.

Now, things have changed. Aware that even the comptroller-general's department did not provide a broad enough system of independent checks on government spending, the government set up a new position, that of the auditor-general.

The auditor-general has much more power than the comptroller-general ever had. She reports directly to the Legislature, bypassing not only the regular civil servants but also the executive branch of government. She has power not only to check vouchers and invoices, but also to move directly into any department, investigating its financial controls and efficiency.

With this added watchdog, the independence of the comptroller-general may no longer be so important. The whole system of financial control may work just as well or better with the comptroller acting as a regular member of the finance ministry team.

However, the government made the changes entirely the wrong way. The direct order forcing the comptroller to begin reporting through normal civil service channels goes against decades of tradition and possibly contravenes the Financial Control Act.

The government should instead introduce amendments to the act in the Legislature, explain its reasoning, and allow full debate on the question of whether removal of some of the comptroller's independence is now appropriate.

To tow or not to tow

Saanich council lowered the boom on the issue of towing illegally parked cars this week. The aldermen recommended that their draft towing bylaw be sent to the scrap yard.

Absolving themselves of any control over tow truck operators might appear to be ducking the issue. In fact council was dealing with the realities of economics and emotion.

The questions were should the proposed bylaw be amended so cars cannot be impounded outside the municipality and should towaway charges be increased.

Gordon's Towing now handles almost all the Saanich business. Cars are stored on the company's impoundment lot in Vic West. Some aldermen thought it was too harsh a penalty for car owners to have to travel all the way to Vic West and also pay a $25 fee.

Unlike Victoria, where many cars are towed away because the owners do not purchase a parking ticket, most cars removed from Saanich are illegally parked in fire lanes or tenants' spaces at apartment buildings and condominiums.

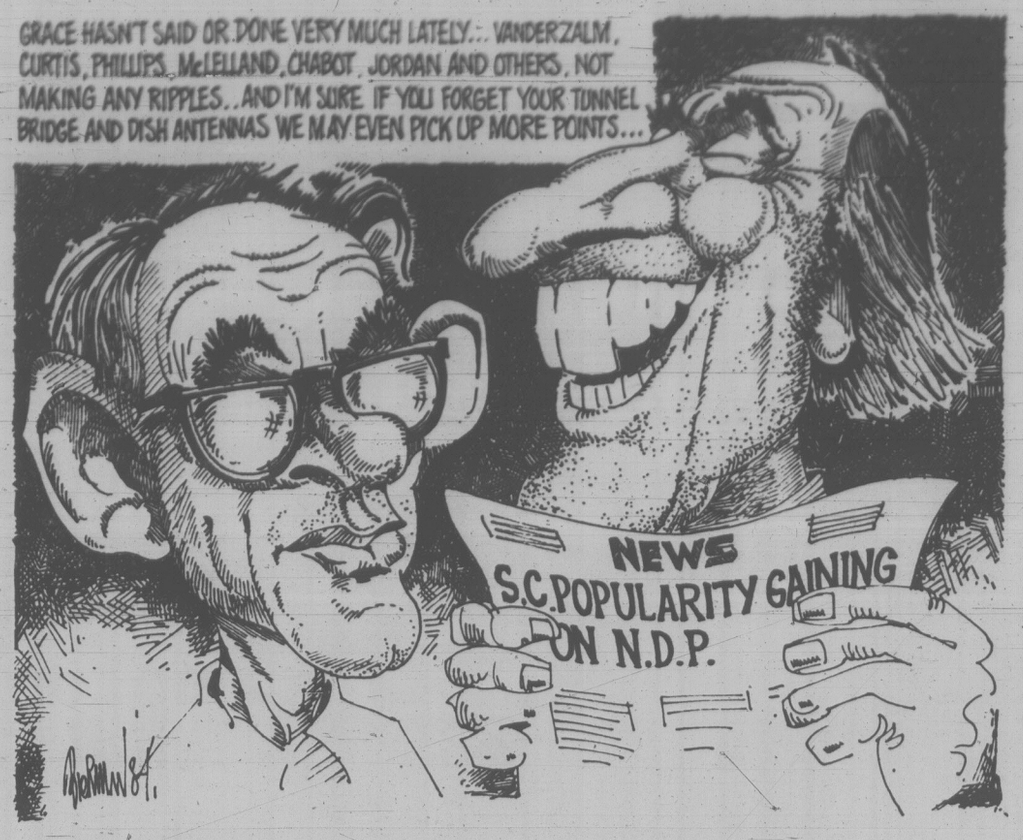

Because four tow-truck companies operate in Saanich, Ald. Irene Block couldn't understand why Gordon's had cornered the market.

One Saanich tow-truck operator explained that, in fact, the companies referred all apartment towaway requests to Gordon's. Why? It isn't economically viable to man an impound lot 24 hours a day as Gordon's does. Also Saanich operators don't want to put up with the arguments from irate car owners.

With a choice between having one Victoria company do the work or legislating it out of business in Saanich, council opted for the former.

In addition, Ald. Block, who was the most vocal spokesman in favor of maintaining towing restrictions, noted that most complaints involve visitor parking at apartments and condominiums. It seemed obvious to her that council had not made adequate provision in its zoning by-laws for parking requirements and for sign posting of towaway zones.

Council wisely decided to investigate both alternatives.

RICHARD GWYN

Ministers fumble family law

OTTAWA — Early in September, the Advisory Council on the Status of Women will hold a most unusual conference. It's topic will be the effect of constitutional change upon women.

The unusual aspect to this conference is that it will be the first actually to consider the consequences of constitutional change upon people, this after more than a decade of chatter about the subject and of rival empire-building by politicians, bureaucrats, lawyers, academics and journalists.

The First Ministers made their last attempt to wrestle the constitution to the ground in the winter of 1978-79. Then, after two full-scale public conferences, and countless in-between and before and after meetings of ministers and officials, the 11 governments managed to agree on exactly two things.

Power transfer

They agreed that the Queen was our Queen. Since this scarcely amounted to a blinding revelation, and desperate to demonstrate their decisiveness by finding something else they could agree on, the group agreed unanimously to transfer jurisdiction over family law from Ottawa to the provinces.

The drawback to this decision was that the First Ministers didn't know what they were talking about. Literally so, because none of the 11 governments had bothered to ask the opinions of anyone who knew anything about family law, let alone of so low a form of life as a parent.

Since then, three provinces, Manitoba, P.E.I. and Newfoundland, have begun to express doubts about what they agreed to do, or at least about the way they agreed to do it.

The problem most commentators have seized on is that once the Divorce Act passes from federal to provincial jurisdiction, the "Reno syndrome" may skip across the border — meaning that some provinces may promote quickie divorces as tourist bait.

In fact, the First Ministers here were forward-looking. They agreed to impose a one-year residency rule in all provinces, but with Ottawa retaining jurisdiction over this aspect [illegible] that no province later could change it.

The problem instead concerns the enforcement of maintenance and custody orders. It's bad enough now; tomorrow, it could become horrendous.

Today's situation, says York University law professor Fred Zemans, is "chaotic". To disentangle themselves, and their property, and their children, a couple can square off in as many as three different federal and provincial courts. But only those maintenance and custody orders handed down under the federal Divorce Act are enforceable automatically across the country. To duck provincial orders, all an errant parent needs to do, just about, is to duck across a provincial boundry.

To complicate the enforcement of custody orders, the legal age of majority varies as widely as, from 16 in Ontario and B.C. to 19 in Manitoba. As a consequence, older children assigned to the custody of one parent in one province can free themselves from the jurisdiction of the courts by boundary-hopping to a province (whether at their own volition or at the instigation of the other parent) where they acquire instantly the status of an adult.

The state of enforcement of maintenance orders (to support children or spouses) isn't so much complicated — which it is — as near non-existent. Experts guess that 70 per cent of maintenance orders are in arrears. No national statistics exist, but in Ontario, some 24,000 errant parents have compiled $33 million worth of maintenance arrears.

The more people move, the fewer maintenance orders are enforced, because to do so requires a court in [illegible] province to try to interpret the law of the province in which order originally was issued; further, these courts have no power to vary the scale of payments even when the defendent cites justifiable cause, and in such circumstances tend to enforce no payment at all.

No reciprocity

As the laws differ, so does the enforcement. Ontario and Quebec have no reciprocal arrangements to enforce maintenance orders. Quebec (for reasons obscure) declines to enforce custody orders enacted in Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia.

"So long as it's done progressively and uniformly, it doesn't matter who does it," says Canadian Council on Children and Youth Executive Director Andy Cohen.

Which, precisely, is the point. The way the First Ministers are going, when Kramer vs Kramer gets to be made in Canada — with the customary movie tax-shelter of course — it'll have to be titled, Kramer vs Kramer vs Kramer vs Kramer vs Kramer vs Kramer vs Kramer vs Kramer, vs Leblanc.

CAROL GOAR

Backbencher with promise

OTTAWA — A stranger to federal politics might be fooled into lumping Jim Peterson together with the 21 other first-time Liberal MPs on Parliament Hill.

He doesn't flaunt his PhD in civil law. He doesn't talk about the fact that he worked for the same firm as John Turner for three years and that he still keeps in close touch with his friend and former associate.

He doesn't mention that he was the lawyer who arranged to get Soviet ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov into North America, or that his younger brother David came within a mere 45 votes of winning the Ontario Liberal leadership five years ago.

To all outward appearances, the 38-year-old Toronto lawyer behaves like any other Liberal freshman, sitting quietly on the lowly backbenches of the House of Commons every day, listening attentively and never drawing attention to himself.

Subtle signs

But it doesn't take long to sense that this MP is different. There are dozens of subtle signs:

— After four months in Parliament, everyone seems to know him — journalists, the party brass, other MPs and the cocktail party elite.

— He is already being buttonholed by colleagues in hallways and lounges for secret strategy sessions.

— It was Peterson who threw a glittering 40th birthday party earlier this month for the prime minister's principal secretary Jim Coutts.

— Without back-stabbing or fanfare, Peterson managed to emerge, after one or two meetings, as chief Liberal spokesman in the Commons finance committee.

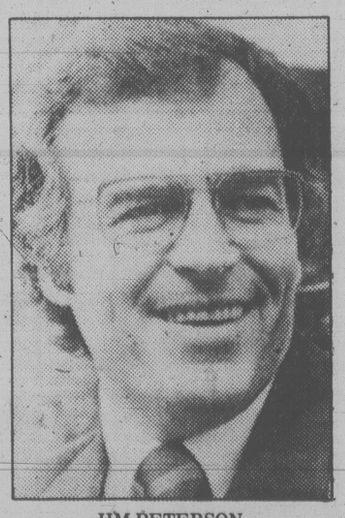

But the clearest signal that Peterson was annointed to go on to bigger things came when Prime Minister Trudeau chose him, this spring, to be chairman of a special task force on regulatory reform.

Trudeau set up five of these task forces, and boasted in his Throne Speech that they would do great things to bring government closer to the real needs of Canadians.

Party insiders saw a second reason for their creation. All but two of the task forces are headed by the Liberal veterans who probably thought they were in line for cabinet jobs — former ministers Warren Allmand and John Reid, former party whip Tom Lefebvre and long-time Trudeau loyalist Herb Breau. (The other rookie chairman, 38-year-old Toronto lawyer David Smith, is another MP to watch.)

Peterson's task — sorting through the federal government's 140 pieces of legislation designed to regulate everything from the air waves to the marketing of eggs — could hardly be described as glamorous or high-profile. But it is the kind of job a man looking to establish his credentials in the party would be eager to tackle.

The challenge is formidable. The government has been studying ways to cut red tape almost since it began tangling Ottawa in it. The most recent investigation — still not complete — began two years ago when Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers asked the Economic Council of Canada to come up with "guidelines governments could employ in determining what areas of regulation are likely to bring a significant adverse economic impact and what practical changes in public policies might be undertaken to improve government regulation."

JIM PETERSON
. . .quiet ambition

The Economic Council was given two and half year years and a large well-paid staff to do it. Peterson has six months, seven junior MPs and a research staff of four.

"The task is gargantuan," he said in an interview this week. "One of our major problems will be to come up with concrete, realistic recommendations for action by our deadline of December 19."

So far, the council, employing four full-time professional economists under the direction of a Berkeley expert, and calling on a body of 15 consultants — 10 with doctorates — has only published an interim report.

The subject is simply too big. The council promises, however, a final report this December.

Peterson refuses to be inimidated. "I know this area has been studied a lot. What I intend do differently is to put my report in a form so direct that the government can just bring in a bill to change things. One of the advantages of being an MP is that you can do something practical."

Asked if the task force might be viewed as a stepping stone to greater responsiblity — specifically a cabinet portfolio — Peterson smiles enigmatically.

"It was a challenge. I was asked. It offers me the potential to make a great contribution to people's lives over the long-run."

The words almost echo the ones Peterson used last winter when reporters asked why he was running for office. "You have a responsibility to lead and serve if you can," he said.

Jim Peterson is soft-spoken but rarely at a loss for words. He is polished, but not stuffy, competitive but not cutthroat about it. He knows how to wait patiently, confident that his talent will get him where he wants to go — as it always has before.

Ideal background

His biography reads as if Peterson's success is all but pre-ordained: United Nations consultant at the age of 27; legal counsel to a federal task force on housing at the age of 28; taught law at the University of Toronto from 1974 until his election while he was a partner at the highly-respected Toronto law firm of McMillan, Binch; director of the National Ballet of Canada; vice-president of the Canadian Professional Tennis Association, a list of academic publications a mile long.

His family background, too, seems ideal. His father Clarence, a Saskatchewan native who moved to London to set up his own wholesale electronic company, served as a city alderman while Peterson was growing up. His wife, Heather, prom queen and debating champion at Central Secondary School, the London high school they both attended, was chairman of the Ontario Liberal campaign committee in 1979.

When he came to Ottawa, four months ago the words "cabinet material" and "rising star" had been written all over him by an admiring press.

He said nothing and quietly went about his job. Some observers figured the star had faded. But most are waiting and watching.

Power prices

B.C. Hydro's lowest domestic rate of 3.0¢ per kilowatt-hour of electricity is more than twice Seattle City Light's highest rate of 1.2¢/kwh, even though B.C. Hydro exports surplus electricity to Seattle.

Ironically, B.C. Hydro buys television commercials urging conservation of electricity but punishes those who consume less than 550 kwh (in the two-month billing period) by charging the even higher rate of 4.5¢/kwh which in Seattle costs five times less, 0.78¢/kwh, in an all-electric home where the rate rises to the usual-home rate of 1.2¢/kwh for consumption in excess of 2,400 kwh.

Instead of hiring another $60,000 member of its Board of Directors, B.C. Hydro should hire Seattle City Light to advise on how to improve the efficiency of the operation. Perhaps B.C. Hydro has too many employees, including highly paid ones, compared with the amount of electricity that it generates.

In addition to being inefficient, B.C. Hydro might be deliberately overcharging electricity consumers in order to subsidize its sale of natural gas. This would be not only unfair to electricity users but also misleading to those paying for the installation of gas because, once hooked, they will probably be hit with large price increases. Eventually, of course, the natural gas will be gone while water-generated electricity will continue forever, being a form of solar power. — E. Harvey Richardson, 1871 Elmhurst Place.

Union questions

Recent actions by the B.C. government employees with their leaders demonstrate political animosity with the desire to promote disorder in our public service.

The point in contention is that the government authority has been advised by no less than three actuarial reports that government employees should contribute a small amount more to their pension fund to keep it solvent and in consequence able to meet its financial responsibilities to future superannuates of government service.

The following questions should be faced and answered without equivocation by our provincial representatives.

1. Should employees paid by the public purse be permitted as a group to espouse the cause of a political party?

2. Should officers of public employee unions or associations be permitted to hold office on the executive of provincial or national union assemblies?

3. Should employees of BCGEU who wish to publicly support any political party be required either to resign or obtain leave of absence?

4. Should union dues be subject to checkoff by the employer without restraint?

5. Should secondary picketing be permitted?

6. Should strike votes be by mail and supervised by judicial authority?

We challenge our sitting members to state their position on the foregoing questions in particular and union power and arrogance in general. — K. R. Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

Loch is saved

The recent decision of the North of Scotland Hydro-electric Board to postpone the building of the Craigroyston-Ben Lomond Pump-Storage Plant, publicized in your article "Help Save Loch Lomond," Dec. 21, 1978, is a step in the right direction.

Credit must be given to many people, at home and abroad, for voicing their objections so vigorously and for contributing so generously to our fund.

Support from them, and from the press, who have consistently given us a fair and understanding coverage, has helped to bring about a reappraisal of the necessity for such a large scheme in the present economic climate. — Mrs. Donald Colquhoun, Hon. Secretary, Friends of Loch Lomond, Tarbet, Arrochar, Loch Lomond, Scotland.

Allotting beds

It is high time that attention was drawn to a most disturbing thoughtlessness in the allotment of extended-care accommodation.

Granted that in the interest of fairness these accommodations are selected on the basis of a person's numerical position on a list of eligibles, in point of fact this method at times leads to considerable distress on the part of the people concerned.

For instance, at the present time the re-opening of the original facilities at the Priory on Goldstream Avenue has led to the allotment of beds to certain elderly patients who are most unhappy at the prospect of going there, not because the quality of care is in any way in doubt but simply because its rather remote location in some cases means that the possibility of a visit by those dearest to them is rendered slim indeed.

Consider the case of one known patient, 80-odd years old, who has been so allotted. Her only relative, also 80 or older and on very limited income (with no car) and with a heart condition. The lady in question, I am sure, feels completely abandoned. This is not an isolated case.

At the same time, there are other persons, lower on the list, it is true, for whom the location would work no hardship since their relatives are mobile enough to visit them at any time.

Perhaps the rigid rule of precedence could be broken in the interest of compassion now and then. The persons most conversant with these people's needs, the social workers at our hospitals, are very conscientious, sensitive and fair people and I think a little say in the allotment of accommodation may very safely be left in their hands. — Jean Bulinch, 3851 Carey Road.

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

As a tale of mismanagement, suspicious dealings and governmental irresponsibility, the catalogue of horrors stemming from the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal has few recent equals. As late as 1972, Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau was maintaining that the Olympics could no more run a deficit than he could have a baby — that the total cost would be $120 million, and that sales of commemorative stamps and coins would cover the entire cost. The actual price tag turned out to be $1.5 billion, and the deficit was $1 billion.

It was, said Quebec Premier Rene Levesque in 1977, when he appointed Judge Albert Malouf of the Quebec Superior Court to head an inquiry into the affair, "a massive abuse of public funds . . . The whole bloody setup requires light." Judge Malouf's commission has provided that light. In May, 1979, after eight months of public hearings, the commission tabled documents showing, among other things, that Montreal paid the consulting firm of Regis Trudeau et Associes its full bill of $6.9 million for work on the Olympic stadium, even though it had committed numerous errors and never finished the stadium's plan.

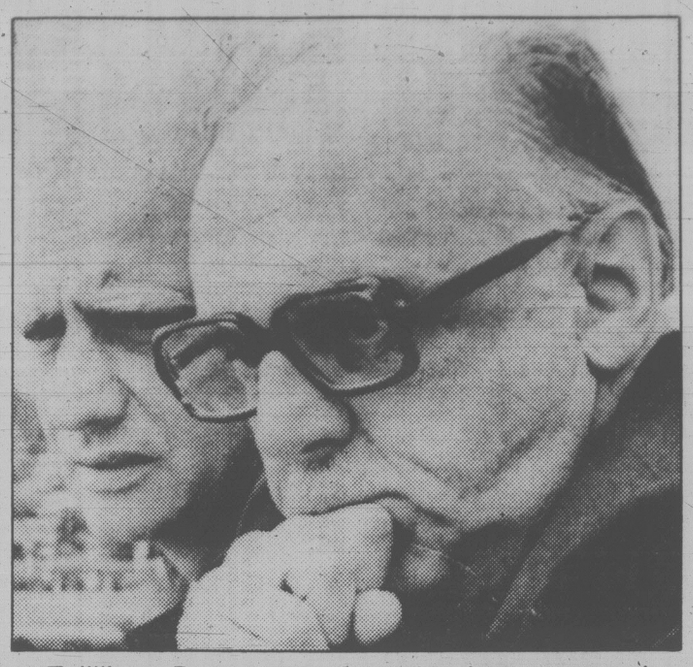

(Mr. Trudeau's firm, notes Judge Malouf, paid for the construction of a $138,000 house for Gerald Niding, then chairman of the City of Montreal's executive committee; Mr. Trudeau also paid $42,000, listed in the firm's books as a political contribution, to a senior civil servant who later became head of the Olympic Installations Board).

Now, 17 months later than expected, the Malouf Commission has handed down its final report. It assigns "preponderant blame" for the Olympics fiasco to Mr. Drapeau, who, carried away by a blind love of spectacle, treated the Games as a private indulgence. He acted as chief organizer although he lacked "the necessary aptitude and competence" and, as mayor of the city, "should never have placed himself in such a situation."

Even now, after months of revelations by the Malouf commission, the cumulative impact of its report is stunning. That Paris architect Roger Taillibert was allowed to direct the project from a distance of 4,800 kilometres, despite almost no awareness of construction problems in Quebec, is shocking enough; that his contract was never signed, and that his appointment was authorized only two years after he started work, by one resolution of Montreal's executive committee — not even the whole council! — surpasses understanding.

(To rub salt on the wound, efforts to put a roof on the unfinished $615 million Olympic stadium were called off the other day when it was found the structure wasn't strong enough to support a 170-metre concrete tower which would have held a retractable covering for the 70,000-seat stadium. Montreal's La Presse, in an editorial lamenting the report, noted that the stadium "cost more than those of Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Dallas, Detroit, Kansas City, New York and Seattle put together." And the cost mounts daily).

There is more, much more; the commission commends a long series of "conflicts of interest and other irregular practices" to Quebec's attorney-general for the possible laying of charges. But the worrying thing — the frightening thing — is that although there are few facts in this report that haven't been public knowledge for some time, Mr. Drapeau remains mayor of Montreal. He has not been voted out on a crest of public outrage; he is unlikely to be voted out. His philosophy that grandiose schemes are preferable to municipal concerns like housing and public works, and his confidence that people will pay any number of taxes to feed his overweening visions, are supported by the majority of the voters. And that, to put it mildly, is unsettling.

Japan battles red tide pollution in sea, lakes

By GEOFFREY LEAN

OSAKA — Japan's waters are turning to blood, in the latest of the pollution plagues to hit this much afflicted country.

Explosive growths of red plankton, which feed on pollution, are covering Japan's lakes and coastal waters, ruining beauty spots, endangering drinking water, and causing millions of pounds worth of damage to fisheries every year. And Japanese experts say that these red tides, as they call them, are spreading worldwide.

They are caused by pollution building up in the lakes and semi-enclosed seas where the water takes a long time to renew itself. As summer comes and the waters warm up, the plankton begin to multiply, flourishing in particular on the nitrogen and phosphorous in the pollution, and suddenly the surface of the water becomes covered with a thick layer of plankton.

Each lake or bay has its own type of plankton and so each turns its own hue. Most take on one shade or another of red, but a few turn grey or even green.

Now all of this country's 50 major lakes are affected. Lake Biwa, in the centre of Japan, which is the only source of drinking water for the 13 million people of the region containing Osaka, the country's second city, and Kyoto, its old capital, is one of the worst affected.

Once famed for its clear, translucent waters, Lake Biwa has become a byword for pollution. The plankton make drinking water smell offensive, block filtration plants and may even, despite the rigorous water purification process, pose a health hazard.

The beautiful Seto inland sea to the west of Osaka is similarly spoiled. The plankton have suffocated millions of fish, and caused enormous damage to the big fish-farming industry.

Tokyo Bay and other bays are also affected, and Japanese government scientists say that the tides are spreading in North and South America, and even in Europe.

Spurred on by popular protest, the government of the province which contains Lake Biwa has recently banned the sale and use of all the synthetic detergents which are the source of about a fifth of the phosphorous in Japanese waters.

The ban followed a campaign by local housewives, fishermen, doctors, and even small shopkeepers' associations and chambers of commerce.

Banning detergents is the simplest, least costly way of reducing the pollution the tides feed on. But the authorities have also been tackling industrial pollution: discharges to the Seto inland sea, for example, have been halved in three years.

The main source of the trouble, however, has yet to be tackled. Despite Japan's industrial achievement, most of the effluent flows untreated or only partially treated into lakes and the sea. Over the last five years the number of houses connected to sewers has doubled, but even so more than 60 per cent are without sewers.

Take a celebrity to lunch

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Gloria Vanderbilt is a celebrity. River House is a Manhattan residential structure in which apartments sell at $1.1 million. Miss Vanderbilt wants to buy a $1.1 million apartment in River House, but River House's board of directors, which represents the building's tenants, refuses to sell it to her.

Miss Vanderbilt is suing. She says River House is discriminating against her because she is a woman and is a friend of Bobby Short, a pianist and singer who is black. River House says it is not discriminating against her because of her sex or her friends' race, but simply does not want the "unwelcome publicity" she would bring to River House.

Anyhow, says the board, Miss Vanderbilt can't afford a $1.1 million apartment. Miss Vanderbilt has answered this by offering to put the full purchase price into escrow until her case is settled.

This affair exposes once again not only the staggering prices of New York apartments, but also the hardship and humiliation which America's celebrities must endure because of government's failure to grant them the same protections it gives other minority groups.

Note that River House denies discriminating against Miss Vanderbilt on sexual or racial grounds. There are laws against that kind of thing. It is quite brazen, however, about confessing to discrimination against her on grounds of celebrity, or, in its spokesman's words, as a carrier of "unwelcome publicity."

Celebrities in this country are the forgotten minority. No equal rights legislation shelters them from the rejections of landlords. No powerful lobbies toil on their behalf. Television networks do not appoint vice-presidents to prevent the flow of celebrity jokes into the nation's living rooms.

Cities and buildings may be redesigned to make life more bearable for physically handicapped, but for celebrities no protective dividers are erected in streets and public buildings to shelter them from the insolent touching, ogling and assault by autograph hounds.

No law protects the celebrity from having to ride in the back of the limousine. When the celebrity goes to a restaurant, to be sure, no one refuses service. But where is the celebrity seated? At the most prominent table in the room, so that everyone is encouraged to stare and whisper.

"Rejected for transporting unwelcome publicity, I hear."

Manhattan with its high concentration of celebrities has evolved restaurants, bars, neighborhoods, stores and discotheques where these wretches can hang out together with none but their own kind.

A celebrity acquaintance took me to a celebrity bar on the East Side recently. It was filled with highly publicized faces, but my delicate liberal sensitivity restrained an impulse to badger them to autograph my cocktail napkin. Good form requires that you pretend not to notice that they look different from other people.

They cannot help it if they look different. Underneath they are just as human as you and I, just as human as women and blacks and physically handicapped folks and people who worship by handling rattlesnakes. All they want, besides several million dollars and regular bookings on the Johnny Carson show, is to be treated like ordinary human beings.

For this reason it is the height of bad manners to fawn over them and notice their celebrated status. If you are introduced to, say, Woody Allen, why remind him that he'd have a tough time passing inspection at River House by saying, "I sure am thrilled to meet one of the great publicity carriers of our time, Woody?" What you say is, "I'm sorry, I didn't get your first name, Mr. Whalen."

Or if it is somebody like Jacqueline Onassis: "Are you by any chance related to a fellow named Onassis who lives out in Missouri?"

After they accept you, celebrities can be just as warm and friendly as your Aunt Pearl and Uncle Theodore, though their conversation tends to be a bit dull, being concerned with putting $1.1 million into escrow, wishing they could strangle a certain photographer or tax auditor, skiing in Switzerland and other such eyeball glazers.

A lot of them, of course, do like to sit up until all hours of the night, but this is probably because they hate to go back to the terrible apartments which are the only kinds of places they are permitted to live. There are exceptions to this rule. Henry Kissinger, for example, always leaves early, but this is probably because he has a splendid apartment at River House.

Why they let him in is a mystery, since he is a far more celebrated celebrity than Miss Vanderbilt and always brings publicity by the deadweight ton. Maybe Kissinger's variety is welcome publicity.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

Every time I think I'm getting a grip on the noises the birds around here make, something happens to take the wind out of my sails. The latest was at Witty's Lagoon.

But before we get into that, let me set the stage.

About a month ago I was enjoying the birding of the Okanagan with Steve Cannings and a couple of his sons. During my four days in Canada's desert, where by the way I experienced some of the heaviest rain I'd seen since winter on the coast, Steve helped introduce me to about a dozen birds I'd never seen before — among them a drab gnome that goes under the handle of the Dusky Flycatcher.

The Dusky Flycatcher is one of a tribe of similar gnomes that scientists call empidonax flycatchers. Empidonax, freely translated, means "king of the gnats." The kings of the gnats, as a group, are enough to give birdwatchers gray hair. Any description of one of them is equally appropriate for any other.

Fortunately, during the nesting season these tiny insect eaters do two things that help to sort them out: they seek different habitats in which to live; and then, supposedly, make quite different noises.

So it was that I faced my first Dusky Flycatcher — he about 70 feet up in a Yellow Pine and me at ground level. At that range he looked as much like a big bee as he did like a bird. But I was assured by the Cannings gang that he was a Dusky Flycatcher.

Again, fortunately, he was making a noise — his idea of a song. his presentation consisted of three parts — slurp, tick, zeee — which is the best I can do phonetically.

Checking later on the standing of my little Dusky with Hammond's — another king of gnats from the Interior — I found that the two gave no less an authority than Roger Tory Peterson — the Grand Poobah of North American birdwatchers — fits. Apparently, while Peterson was prepared to accept their choice of habitat as a useful clue as to their identities, he wasn't so sure about the noise they make.

Well, I came back from the Okanagan, accepting the word of the Cannings and happy to be back with a familiar friend in the king-of-the-gnats clan — the Western Flycatcher, the only empidonax we get here during the nesting season.

At least I was happy until last weekend, when a flycatcher at Witty's made a noise that had me thinking I was about to set a new record with a Dusky Flycatcher on the coast.

What I heard was another three-part "song." This one seemed, at first, a lot like the noise I thought a Dusky should make, but, trying to put it into phonetics, it came out feezit, tu, sweet — nothing like any Dusky, or Western, I'd ever heard.

While I knew it wouldn't do much good to see the bird, I stalked it for a while. Sure enough, when I did see it, it didn't do any good. The bird sure looked like a Western; it also looked like a Dusky — and a Hammond's — and a Least — and a couple of others I could mention.

As I walked back to the car, totally at a loss about the bird, I could hear him intoning his "love song" ad nauseum: feezit, tu, sweet, feezit, tu, sweet.

My first reaction, the one I most often resort to at times like this, is to forget the bird — pretend I never heard it, or put it down to just another figment of my imagination.

But despite some distractions — a Townsend's Warbler that came down out of the tops of the Douglas-firs long enough to let me see his gorgeous colors, and an Osprey at work on a new nest across the Lagoon, that freezit, tu, sweet would not go away.

Back at the car, thumbing through Peterson and his thoughts on the kings of the gnats, I found the answer to that call. It was a Western Flycatcher. What I'd been hearing was its "dawn song" — sung only during the first hour or so of the day.

I checked my watch; only seven a.m.

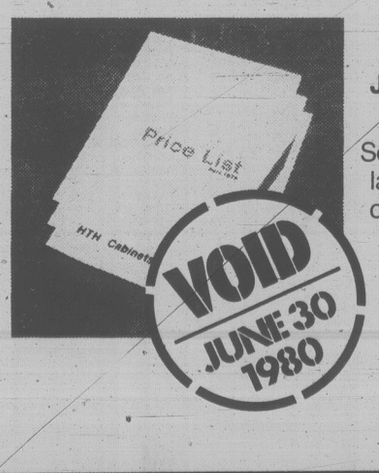

Whew! Talk about early birds . . . and worms.

Chartered banks drop prime rates

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's chartered banks quickly followed the Bank of Canada's lead Thursday, dropping their prime rates to 13.25 per cent from 13.75 per cent.

The central bank's rate dropped Thursday to 10.67 per cent from 11.29 last week.

The Bank of Montreal, the Royal Bank of Canada, the Bank of Nova Scotia, Toronto-Dominion Bank, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Mercantile Bank of Canada and the National Bank of Canada all joined in dropping the rate charged to their most credit-worthy corporate customers.

The Royal Bank said rates on consumer loans, mortgages and other loans are under review.

The Bank of Canada rate, which usually sets the trend for banks' borrowing charges, has been dropping steadily since it reached a high of 16.2 per cent April 3.

The bank rate, which floats from week to week, is set one-quarter of a percentage point above the average interest paid on 91-day treasury bills auctioned every Thursday at the central bank to raise money to finance part of the government's operations.

The new average interest paid on $680 million of 91-day treasury bills is 10.42 per cent, down from 11.04 per cent last week.

Despite the decline in the Bank of Canada rate, chartered banks and other financial institutions have been slow to lower their rates, and the prime rate remained at 13.75 for nearly a month.

Opposition MPs hammered the banks last week for not passing lower interest rates on to consumers more quickly, and Finance Minister Allan MacEachen said he would make sure they do so.

Bob Rae, New Democratic Party finance critic, said Thursday the Bank Act should be changed to give the government power to order banks to lower their rates.

He said banks must pass on to consumers the full drop of 0.62 percentage points in the central bank rate.

Progressive Conservative Sinclair Stevens, former treasury board president, said the government could put pressure on the banks to lower their rates further if it wanted to.

"If the minister would give one clear signal that he would like to see these rates down, they would be down in five minutes," Stevens said in an interview.

In New York, meanwhile, Citibank reduced its prime lending rate to 12 per cent from 12 ½ per cent today, nine days after First National Bank of Boston became the first major bank to adopt the lower rate.

Analysts had expected Citibank, the second largest commercial bank in the U.S., to fall in line with the 12 per cent prime since about half of the 20 biggest banks already were at that level.

Grain ports busy

VANCOUVER (CP) — With six weeks to go to the July 31 close of the current crop year, grain terminals in Vancouver and Prince Rupert are close to matching the loading total set for the entire 1978-79 crop year.

By midweek, the elevators had shipped out eight million tonnes of grain, just 300,000 tones short of the previous crop year, a Canadian Wheat Board official said.

Ed Isaac said it appears the two West Coast ports will get up to nine million tonnes by July 31, equalling and possibly surpassing a record set in 1972-73.

The Canadian transport commission anticipates CP Rail and Canadian National Railways together can maintain a flow of 3,000 cars a week to Vancouver for the balance of the crop year.

Prince Rupert is getting about 500 cars a week and is set to break a loading record established last year.

Isaac said one possible impediment to loadings is the reluctance of Prairie farmers to dispatch barley to country elevators.

U.S. recession to last until 1981?

United Press International

A panel of noted economists and business analysts predicted Thursday the current U.S. recession will start to ease early in 1981, which it said will be a year of lower inflation but higher unemployment.

The 10-member Economic Forum of The Conference Board, which twice a year issues detailed analyses of the economic outlook, made the predictions in its forecast for 1980 and 1981. The Conference Board is an independent business research group.

The Forum predicted the recession would begin easing in the first quarter of next year, leading to 0.7 per cent growth in the nation's real gross national product following an expected 0.5 per cent drop in the GNP for this year.

It said consumer inflation in 1981 would average 9.3 per cent, compared with 13.9 per cent forecast for this year, but that unemployment next year would average 8 per cent, compared with its estimate of 7.1 per cent for 1980.

The Forum expects changes in federal economic policy to stimulate the economy. The Carter administration recently has shown signs of easing the tight money and tight credit policies it has been using to combat inflation.

"We look for generally stimulative policy positions in light of a developing serious recession and rising unemployment," said Albert Sommers, chief economist of the Conference Board and Forum chairman.

"The Forum's consensus on real output (GNP) describes a recession of some severity in the second and third quarters of 1980, tapering in the fourth quarter, and giving way to gradually improving levels of output throughout 1981," he said.

The panel recommended stimulating the economy by allowing business to write-off equipment costs faster, cutting taxes on interest and dividend income, and promoting research and development through tax incentives.

The Forum also predicted producer prices would rise 9.7 per cent in 1981, down from an estimated 14.2 per cent this year, and industrial production would grow a meager 0.2 per cent next year, compared with this year's estimated decline of 2.4 per cent.

Mercantile Bank drops U.S. rate

MONTREAL (CP) — The Mercantile Bank of Canada has announced that it is lowering its U.S. dollar base lending rate to 12½ per cent from 13¼ per cent, effective immediately.

BMW 733i

The BMW 733i is a modern classic — the yardstick against which all other sports sedans are measured. Town & Country's automotive writer states "these machines are, quite literally, a thing apart from anything else on the road. They are the driver's car, par excellence". Engineered, and designed for perfection, the 733i is exceptional in finish, as well. Each car is virtually custom finished with an exacting process of cavity sealing, electro-phoretic lining, painting, examination, hand sanding, and re-painting.
The objective — perfect quality of fit and finish. See and test drive the 733i and you'll discover what it is that makes an expensive car worth the money.

GM tops Financial Post list

TORONTO (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. still holds its place as Canada's top industrial corporation in terms of sales, but Canadian Pacific Ltd. has overtaken Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. for second place, The Financial Post reports.

The 1980 issue of The Financial Post 500 shows General Motors of Canada, based in Oshawa, Ont., had sales of $9.41 billion in the latest fiscal year, compared with $8.15 billion for Canadian Pacific of Montreal. Ford, of Canada, based in Oakville, Ont., had sales of $7.15 billion.

Hydro-Quebec of Montreal is given top ranking in terms of both assets and net income. Its assets are listed as $15.5 billion and its net income as $746.21 million.

Ontario Hydro, based in Toronto, has the second-highest assets among industrial corporations with $14.5 billion. Canadian Pacific is third with $11 billion.

Canadian Pacific also has the highest number of employees at 109,700 and is ranked second in terms of net income at $508.14 million. In third place is Alcan Aluminium Ltd. of Montreal, with net income of $475.54 million.

General Motors of Canada ranks only 28th in assets and 11th in net income, while Ford of Canada is No. 26 in assets and No. 324 in net income.

Total sales for the 400 industrials listed are given as $227 billion in the fiscal year of 1979-80. Assets stand at $238 billion and net income at $13 billion.

Among retailers, The Financial Post ranks Dominion Stores Ltd. of Toronto in top spot with sales of $2.66 billion.

Among banks and financial institutions, the front-runner in terms of assets is Royal Bank of Canada, based in Montreal, with holdings worth $51.72 billion.

Among life insurers, Sun Life Assurance Co. of Toronto has the highest values of assets controlled in Canada, worth $7.05 billion. Royal Insurance of Toronto holds first place among property and casualty insurers, with net premium income of $481.8 million.

Canada's largest real estate developer is The Cadillac Fairview Corp. Ltd. of Toronto which has assets of $2.29 billion.

BCFP predicts lumber boom

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Forest Products Ltd. is modernizing its B.C. sawmills and increasing Alberta lumber production capacity because of anticipated high demands for lumber this decade, the company president said Wednesday.

Ken Benson told a Pemberton Securities Ltd. investment seminar his company credits forecasts calling for U.S. housing starts to average two million a year during the 1980s.

B.C. sells about 70 per cent of its lumber to the U.S. In the past, two million housing starts have represented a boom year to the industry.

"There will be the usual peaks and valleys, but over-all the demand will be strong if these forecasts are correct," Benson said.

Despite higher prices for pulp and paper, it is still difficult to justify new capacity because construction costs have escalated in the last 10 years out of proportion to inflation rates.

"Nevertheless, new capacity is being added in newsprint and we are part of it," Benson said.

The company is not planning to increase its marginal output of plywood, which is "nicely balanced to our log supply", he said, but increases in waferboard capacity are planned.

This year's objective is an 18-per-cent return on net assets and a 30-per-cent return on shareholders' equity, he said.

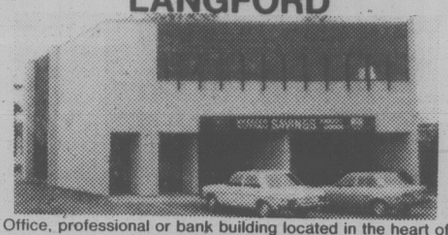

U.S. bank drops interest to 11.5%

NEW YORK (AP) — A small New York bank has reduced its prime lending rate to 11.5 per cent, becoming the first U.S. bank to reach that level since last August.

UMB Bank and Trust Co., a subsidiary of Israel's United Mizrahi Bank, reduced its rate from 12.5 per cent.

Most banks are charging either 12 per cent or 12.5 per cent on loans to their best corporate customers.

B.C. takes its $4M out of coal port

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The B.C. government has withdrawn completely from development of the proposed Ridley Island coal port and will not provide the $4 million promised for support services, a provincial official said today.

The province has been battling with the federal government over who will pay for development of the northeastern B.C. coalfields.

The $4 million was the B.C. share of a $42.5 million package negotiated with Alberta and Ottawa for development of Ridley Island as a grain port.

"The terminal is their (the federal government's) business now," Graham Kedgley, B.C. coal co-ordinator, said today.

He said, however, that the province is still committed to providing road access to Ridley. The $7 million project to build 7.5 kilometres of road began this spring.

The province also has dropped a social and economic impact study it was conducting on the scheme, said Sandy Peel, B.C. deputy industry minister.

He said the study, started in April, is "all up in the air" following federal-provincial negotations last week on the funding of support services for northeast coal development.

"The federal government has made it very clear that they have full jurisdiction over Ridley Island, so it seems the study is their responsibility," Peel said in an interview.

He said an offer from the province to take on the responsibility for establishing a coal terminal on Ridley had been rejected, effectively eliminating the province's involvement in the development.

Peel said it is now up to the National Harbors Board whether the study continues.

Francis McNaughton, harbors board director of engineering sevices, said the only study he is aware of involves the effects of coal dust on pulp from trains passing by the Canadian Cellulose pulp mill in Prince Rupert.

Meanwhile, a researcher in the provincial industry ministry says her department is still working on the socio-economic study and has not been informed the study is no longer required.

Jennifer Howard said the study team now is refining and editing a population and employment impact estimate, and the group expects to visit Prince Rupert within the next few weeks, once "the political area has cleared."

Prince Pupert Alderman Mike Darnell called on the government to complete the study because the development will cause major environmental and economical problems.

He said the study should have been completed long ago.

NDP mounting fund raiser

The New Democratic Party is mounting a public fund-raising drive to eliminate a $150,000 debt and build reserves for the next provincial election, party secretary Yvonne Cocke said Thursday.

The debt is unusual because party finances have traditionally been healthy. But last February's snap federal election, which came just nine months after the concurrent federal and provincial campaigns of 1979, placed a strain on NDP coffers.

Largest creditor is the national wing of the party.

Cocke said if the money were owed to anyone else but the federal NDP, B.C. New Democrats would face a far more serious situation.

The campaign, first discussed at last month's provincial convention in Penticton, will start in October.

"At the moment we are market-testing four areas in the province to find out which methods we should use," Cocke said.

Direct mail appeals for contributions are being sent to residents of Comox, Kimberley, Fort St. John and Vancouver East. The locations were picked on the basis of varying support at the last provincial election.

"The direct mail approach is very costly and it's something we've never tried before," Cocke said.

The NDP also will launch a separate membership campaign this fall to bolster its current enrolment of 31,500. (Affiliated members, mostly trade unionists, bring the total to about 50,000).

Education official talked teacher out of candidacy?

An official in Education Minister Brian Smith's office discouraged a former teacher from running for public office, NDP education critic Gary Lauk charged in the legislature Thursday.

Lauk said Smith's executive assistant, Ronald Tucker, told former Windermere teacher Archie Gaber his candidacy in a Kamloops school board byelection would "complicate (the ministry's) efforts to fully correct his situation."

Gaber subsequently pulled out of the school board race.

Why a ministerial assistant had to interfere with the democratic process in Kamloops, requires an answer from the minister, Lauk said.

A letter containing the charge has been sent to the education ministry, and the ministry has not rebutted the charge that Tucker interfered, he said.

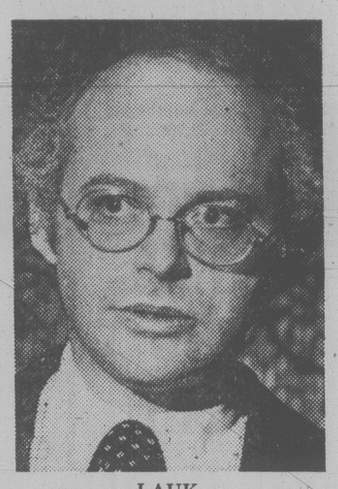

Gaber now lives in Kamloops and works as an instructor at Cariboo College, and as a prison guard.

Lauk said the ministry had taken seven months to act on Gaber's request for an investigation, and as a result, Gaber had filed a grievance against the ministry itself.

When Kamloops school trustee Nelson Riis was elected to Parliament for the Kamloops-Shuswap riding in the last federal election, Gaber decided to run for Riis's seat in the school board byelection.

It was then Tucker told Gaber's lawyer, Daphne Smith, his candidacy would complicate matters for the education ministry, Gaber said Thursday.

Smith told Lauk the ministry had reviewed Gaber's case once, an official of the B.C. Teachers' Federation had reviewed it again, and a third review is under way in the minister's office.

Eurasian milfoil quarantine reinstated

A quarantine program designed to check the spread of Eurasian water milfoil in B.C. will be reintroduced and expanded this summer.

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers said Thursday seven roadside check stations will be set up to inspect boats and trailers for fragments of the aquatic weed which has clogged several B.C. lakes.

NDP cancer statement inaccurate, says doctor

Only Vancouver has a significantly higher rate of cancer than the rest of Canada, not four regions of the province as claimed by Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson.

Dr. David Boyes, director of the Vancouver Cancer Clinic, said that a federal study does not say that southern Vancouver Island, Comox-Strathcona and Central Okanagan districts also have high rates of cancer.

"We come off pretty well," he said.

Mair said while Hanson had quoted statistics from a federal report, the NDP MLA had failed to quote significant key phrases.

The health minister said Hanson, by failing to reveal the complete picture on the incidence of cancer, had created undue and unnecessary concern.

Dr. Boyes said the comparative statistics — a "mortality map" showing deaths in different regions caused by cancer — show that eastern Canada has a higher rate of cancer.

One area of Montreal is statistically one of the worst for cancer, said Dr. Boyes.

He told the Times Thursday the report shows 30 B.C. census districts — including Victoria — have a lower incidence of certain types of cancer than the national average.

Hanson had claimed in the legislature that the four areas mentioned had unusually high cancer rates and should be investigated by the ministries of health and the environment for possible environmental causes.

He said the district of Comox-Strathcona had a high rate of lymph cancer among men, Central Okanagan had high rates of lymph cancer for both sexes, Greater Vancouver had a higher incidence of lung cancer in men and women and southern Vancouver Island had a high rate of ovarian cancer among women.

Dr. Boyes said the study states specifically that only the Vancouver figures are statistically significant.

"You have to remember this kind of data is awfully crude," he said.

Much more work on the figures needs to be done before doctors and researchers can say with confidence why different areas have higher or lower rates of cancer.

"There are all sorts of things you have to look into before you can put a value on it. You have to know the ethnic makeup of the population," Dr. Boyes said.

For example, people born in England statistically are four times more susceptible to lung cancer than the Canadian population as a whole.

The statistics only point the way for further research into possible causes.

Vancouver Island districts with lower than the national average for certain types of cancer include the Cowichan Valley, Victoria with lower rates for stomach and bladder cancers in males and uterine cancers in females and Mount Waddington — northern Vancouver Island — with lower rates for all types of cancers in males.

Royal pardon sought for bomb killer

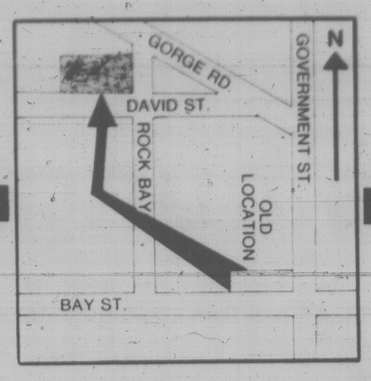

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Laxton, lawyer for convicted kettle bomb killer Jim Lewis, has applied for a pardon for his client under the seldom-used royal prerogative of mercy.

Under the royal prerogative, an investigation is conducted by the national parole board and a recommendation prepared for the solicitor-general.

A full study of the trial and subsequent events is called for under the mercy regulation.

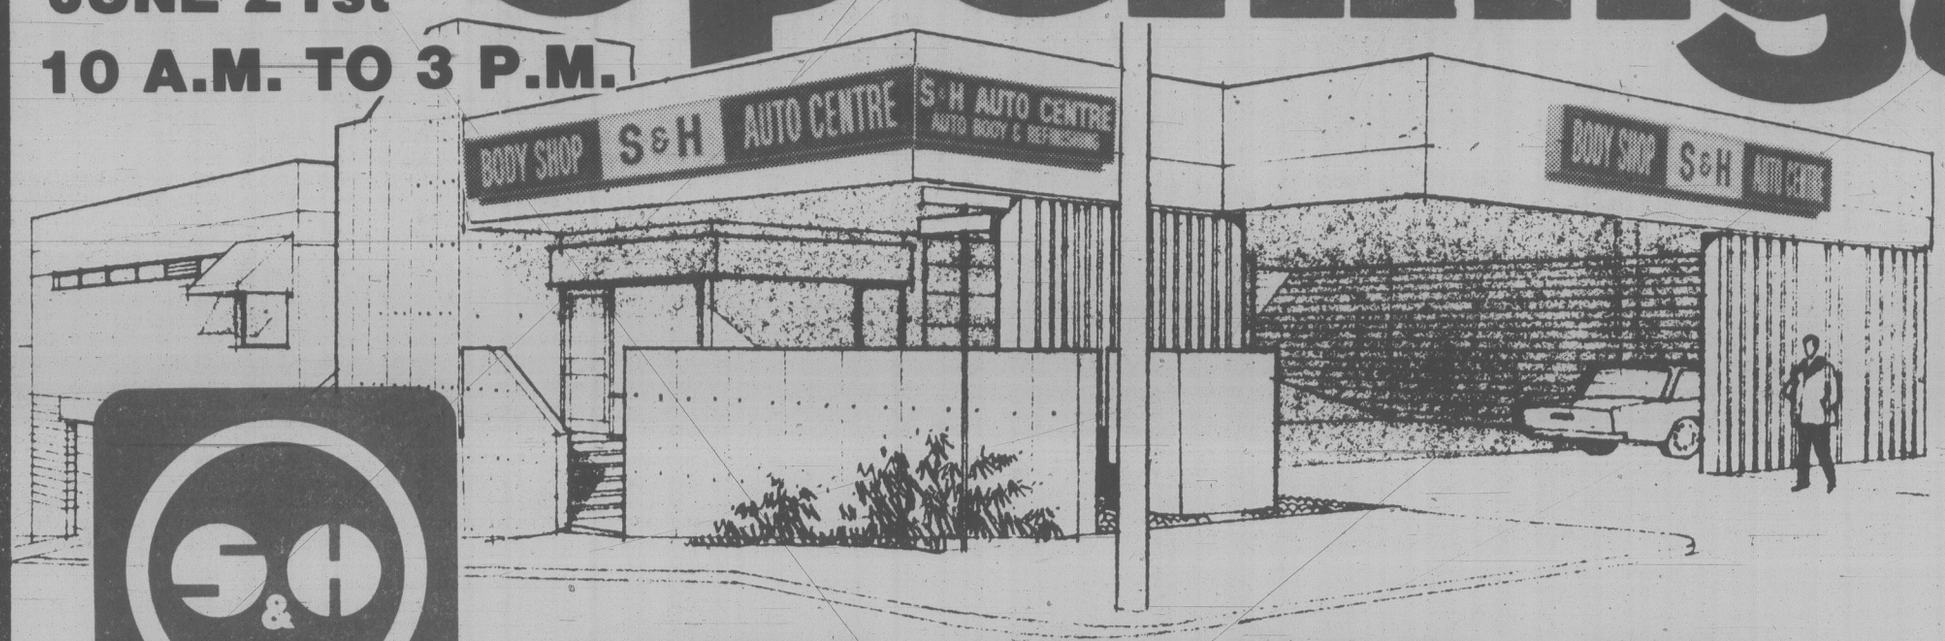

Lewis's next-to-last chance evaporated this week when Justice Minister Jean Chretien rejected Laxton's application for a new trial.

Laxton had argued that new evidence was available in the case, in which a young couple died in a New Westminster, B.C. apartment explosion in 1972. Lewis was convicted three years later.

BILL DICK
MANAGER

It all began in 1946, when a friendly bank manager, taking a chance on two ambitious young men, provided one thousand dollars and a lot of good wishes for the future.

Suddenly, Saunders and Hitchman were a LARGE gas station. In 1965, another big step, as the boys took on the Toyota Dealership in Victoria. Since that date it has been all progress and success, with Toyota sales rocketing, service demands booming!

The next step was a logical one. More space and larger premises. Their existing property was ideally located, and with the purchase of adjoining land, Saunders and Hitchman were in the position to add new modern buildings, and have created the attractive business establishement you see today.

With the sale of their car dealership in 1977, they have expanded their auto body repair business to the new Rock Bay Auto Centre which is fully equipped to service all makes of cars and trucks. Come in and meet the staff today.

Nations Cup may feature scoring stars

The Nations Cup is considering a championship shootout contest to give new lacrosse fans a look at stars like Kevin Alexander, series organizer Malcolm Ashford said Thursday night.

He said the shootout is among ideas being discussed for intermission events at the world box lacrosse tournament, which runs in Victoria, Nanaimo and the Lower Mainland from July 10 to 17.

The idea would be to have the four B.C. teams that are not in the tournament, Victoria, Nanaimo, New Westminster and Vancouver, send two or three of their best shooters to preliminary rounds of the contest at early games with the finalists going to the championship round at the final game in the Pacific Coliseum on July 17.

Presumably it would include Alexander and Jim Lynch of Victoria, Ron MacNeil and Brian Evans of Nanaimo, Doug Hayes and Dave Tasker of Vancouver and Dave Durante and Brian Tasker of New Westminster.

"You might think Alexander would be the obvious winner but you never know. Anything could happen. We are giving this idea some serious thought."

Ashford made the comments in an interview following a news conference at the Imperial Inn called to give latest details on the world championship tournament, involving Australia, the United States, Canada East (Brooklin, Ont.), Canada West (Coquitlam Adanacs) and a native Indian all-star team.

The shootout requires further discussion, Ashford said, but he said it could give the series the lift it needs by allowing all western teams to participate.

"Obviously the ideal thing would to have formed all-star teams from the west and the east, to get all clubs involved, but that might not have been fair competition."

Ashford said the two Canadian teams figure to have a slight edge in the tournament because they have a depth of experience in the game but the visitors could be surprising.

For example, the Australian squad will use formations never before seen in Canada and their players will be very fit.

And the American team, formed from field lacrosse stars, will be thirsting for revenge after Canada beat the same American players in the world field lacrosse series in England two years ago.

It was at that field lacrosse series that the Canadian team came up with the idea for this first-ever box lacrosse world tournament.

Ashford said a crowd of at least 8,000 is expected in Pacific Coliseum for the final, which would be the largest turnout ever for the indoor game.

There are tales of 10,000 or more turning up for field lacrosse games in New Westminster early in the century but the largest boxla crowds on record are just slightly above the 5,000 mark.

The series is being played on a budget of $100,000, which means the turnout has to average 2,000 per game to break even.

"We should be able to hit that target. One exhibition game between the Native All Stars and the North Shore Indians has already been sold out."

Tickets are on sale now at $4 each. In effect they are passes, good any any single game in the series in any city, thereby simplifying the pre-sale process.

There is funding from both the provincial and federal government. The Native Indian team is also getting special grants.

"We're in pretty good shape financially. At least we will be if we get a good turnout to the early games. We know there will be a big turnout to the final."

The championship game will be taped by CBC-TV for national showing on the following weekend.

Official opening ceremonies will be held in Victoria on July 10 when the series opens with Canada West playing the Native team.

"With the final being played in Vancouver it was only fair we had the opening ceremonies in Victoria, which is also the capital city," Ashford said.

On the same night Canada East will play the U.S. in Queens Park Arena.

July 12 — Canada West vs. Canada East in Victoria; Natives vs. Australia in Coquitlam.

The three top teams go on to the next round.

Meanwhile, New Westminster Salmonbellies defeated visiting Adanacs 15-9 in a game Thursday.

TAKING A DROP after driving into water on 18th is Jack Nicklaus, who took double bogey on hole during first round of Canadian Open tournament at Ile Bizard, Que., on Thursday. Nicklaus finished with 71. (CP Wirephoto).

Black-eyed pitcher set to leave 'Frisco

Times News Services

"I'll be out of here soon," pitcher John Montefusco predicted Thursday, the morning after his clubhouse fight with San Francisco Giants manager Dave Bristol.

Montefusco, who came out of the fight with a blackened right eye, had hoped to part company with the National League baseball club before the June 15 trading deadline, but management didn't co-operate. Now, he believes, there will be a post-deadline deal.

"June 15th doesn't mean anything when something like this happens," he said.

After the player and manager exchanged blows in Bristol's office, Montefusco said the manager "sucker-punched me." Bristol, who suffered a scratch on his face, said Thursday: "I didn't throw the first punch."

Montefusco suggested a possible lawsuit over the incident, but then said: "I'm leaving it up to the players' association."

Bristol described the altercation after Wednesday's game as something necessary . . . "I did what I had to do. I don't want anyone screaming at me, telling me this and that. You just can't get into a situation where a player is dictating to a manager."

The fight in the manager's office apparently was sparked when Montefusco became angry at being relieved in the ninth inning.

Elsewhere in the majors, Nolan Ryan allowed one hit over seven innings and reliever Joe Sambito finished up as Houston Astros beat St. Louis Cardinals 2-0. It was Houston's 12th straight home victory, a club record, and kept the Astros three games ahead of Los Angeles in the National League West.

In other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Montreal 5-3 in 10 innings but Expos retained their standing atop the East Division when Atlanta Braves edged Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 and San Diego Padres beat Philadelphia Phillies 4-3. (Linescores on page 14)

Payoff lures fans

The time of 2:04.4 for the mile was a full second better than its previous best.

Warm weather, combined with the massive triactor payoff of $5,536 on Tuesday, attracted a crowd of 1,462 fans Thursday — one of the largest mid-week attendances in three years of harness racing at the Sidney facility. Thursday's mutuel play was $124,305.

But the triactor was disappointing in comparison to Tuesday's total. Dunhoe combined with Senga Bogey and Pride Bay for a $198.40 payoff.

Elsewhere and otherwise:

Win or lose, on the basis of a maximum 45 minutes work in Montreal tonight, Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran will become millionaires.

Leonard, a 24-year-old American, is guaranteed $5 million for defending his World Boxing Council welterweight title — and it could go as high as $10 million. Duran, 29, of Panama will get $1.5 million.

However, the promoters say that extra revenue from such things as closed-circuit televison, pay-TV and delayed home telecast could boost Leonard's take to $10 million. Duran's income would rise proportionately.

The promoters of the fight say they need a crowd of 41,000 to break even after paying $4.15 million for the rights. So far, slightly more than 32,000 of a total 77,256 tickets have been sold.

The fight will be shown on closed circuit in Memorial Arena, and about 1,600 tickets have been sold.

Also in hockey, Winnipeg Jets of the NHL have traded defenseman Craig Norwich to the St. Louis Blues in exchange for right winger Rick Bowness.

Budgets' health better for Santa Rosa's visit

Victoria Budgets will be in a little better shape while facing Santa Rosa Quanella in Super Series softball games this weekend at Royal Athletic Park.

Doubleheaders against the top-flight team from the United States are scheduled to start 7 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Victoria team doctor Dan Buie has given the green light to two players who have been sidelined with injuries. Centrefielder Reg Underwood, who has been out with stretched knee ligaments, and shortstop Warren Campbell, suffering a foot injury, will play this weekend.

However, pitcher Mark Smith, who received a 30-stitch gash in his right (non-throwing) arm last week, is a doubtful starter and catcher Mark Lalonde, who is wearing a neck brace after a car accident last Friday, will definitely sit on the sidelines.

Because of the injury to Smith, coach Harvey Stevenson has persuaded the Canadian team to let Budgets retain the services of Rob Guenter for the Super Series tussles with Oxnard, Calif., June 29-30. Guenter had been schedule to play with the Niagara Falls team that will represent Canada in the world championships at Tacoma in August.

Last season, the four-game series with Santa Rosa finished in a split and fans were treated to some of the best softball action ever seen in Victoria.

Stevenson feels he has the better pitching staff but Santa Rosa does boast three top hurlers — Chuck D'Arcy, K.G. Fincher and Ray Balzwick.

Sports of all sorts

Burns hungry for golf title

ILE-BIZARD, Que. (CP) — George Burns had played four seasons on the professional golf circuit before cashing his first winner's cheque after the Crosby Pro-Am earlier this year.

But that absence of victory hadn't stopped him from earning more than $367,000 in the four years. The Crosby was worth another $54,000, and the Brooklyn, N.Y., native showed Thursday that he'd like the $63,000 that will go to the winner of the 71st Canadian Open.

Burns shot a four-under-par 66 on the 6,628-yard course 30 kilometres west of Montreal, giving him a one-stroke lead over Johnny Miller, Tommy Valentine and Bob Gilder heading into the second round of the $350,000, 72-hole championship today.

A sore shoulder has cut into Burns's practice time in the last two months, leaving him somewhat surprised at his score, which was one over the course record held by Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf.

"I'm surprised I shot what I did," he acknowledged after his early-afternoon finish under sunny skies. "But I think the scores will come down later today. Somebody out there could shoot a 64 or 65."

But it wasn't to be, and Burns's name still was atop the leader board at the end of the round. The critical holes were the fifth, sixth and seventh, all of which he birdied for a three-under-par 32 heading out, and the 13th and 14th, which he birdied coming home.

His only bogey was at the par-four, 434-yard 16th, where he put his drive into the rough and sent his second shot into trees.

Miller might have forged a better first-round position if his game had scored the way he said it played.

"I shot a 63, but it added up to a 67," said Miller, who had five birdies and two bogeys, including a three-putt 16th green.

"I played real well today. I love this golf course — it's a terrific course."

Miller, who was using a new putter, said he putted poorly, then switched off, saying: "Actually, I hit some good long putts — I'm just not stroking it."

Behind the trio at 67 were six golfers at two-under-par 68, including Jim Nelford of Burnaby and Roger Klatt of Barrie, Ont. They shared scores with Hale Irwin, Jim Dent, Leonard Thompson and Bob Shearer.

Two Victorians in the field — Bob Beauchemin and Jim Rutledge — were well off the pace. Beauchemin shot 73 to tie for 61st and Rutledge carded a 76 to end up in a tie for 106th.

Rocky Thompson scored a hole-in-one using a six iron on the par-three, 176-yard fifth hole.

The field was to be cut to the low 70 and ties after the second round today.

Tonight in sports

Softball, baseball and harness racing tonight plus Budgets fastball and track and field Saturday highlight the first half of this week's sports program. And once again there is a wide variety of sport to choose from on television.

TONIGHT

The Coast Projects-Molsons invitational men's softball tournament gets under way at 6:30 at Macdonald Park. It continues all day Saturday starting at 8 a.m. with finals set for Sunday afternoon.

As well, there are games in the Heywood Men's League, with Capital Builders going against Stratcona Hotal at 6:30 at Heywood Avenue Park, and in the Sidney League, with Prairie Inn playing Harveys at 6:30 at Sanscha Park.

Harness racing continues at Sandown Raceway with parade to the post at 5:20 tonight and 1:20 Saturday.

SATURDAY

For those who like to watch track and field, the 27th annual Y-Times meet, featuring more than 1,000 athletes from Canada and the United States, gets under way at 10 a.m. at Centennial Stadium. It continues Sunday at 9 a.m. and runs all day with trophies presented around 4 p.m.

Cricket matches in the Victoria and District Association feature Albion versus Saanich at Beacon Hill Park and Incogs at Metchosin at 1 p.m.

For lacrosse fans there's an Inter-City Women's League game between Victoria Dolphins and Coquitlam at 1 p.m. at Pearkes Arena and the same teams meet again at the same time Sunday.

In the evening, there's fastball action at Royal Athletic Park where Victoria Budgets take on Santa Rosa of California at 7 in the first game of their Super Series doubleheader. The teams meet in another doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Television

Wrestling on Channel 13 kicks off the sports coverage at 10:30 a.m. and at 11:15 there's baseball, California Angels at Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Cardinals at Cincinnati Reds on Channel 5.

At noon, Sportsweekend on Channels 2 and 6 highlight the third round of the Canadian Open golf tournament, horse racing and gymnastics.

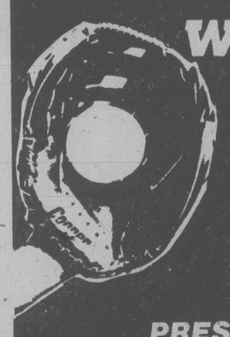

There is Players International Tournament tennis action on Channel 8 at 1:30 p.m. and wrestling at the same time on Channel 13.

At 2 p.m. there is U.S. Olympic trials in archery and boxing on Channel 5 and at 3 p.m. you can watch Canadian Open golf on Channel 7, wrestling on Channel 8 or WCT tennis featuring Bjorn Borg versus Jimmy Connors on 13.

Racquetball is highlighted on Channel 2 at 3:30 p.m. and at 4 there is America's Athletes 1980 on Channel 4, Sports Spectacular, featuring professional underwater sports competition and freestyle rollerskating on Channel 7, and Wide World of Sports including Part 2 of the Datsun Special from Goodwood, Ontario, on Channel 8.

At 5 p.m., Wide World of Sports on Channel 4 features world featherweight boxing and there's more boxing on Channel 5 at 8 p.m.

Swift action required on fish act revision

Some rambling notes along the trail:

It appears, from a recent Supreme Court of Canada decision, that the federal Fisheries Act requires a swift revision.

On this coast, at least, the Fisheries Act was envisioned as a statute which would serve to eliminate some of the bias in favor of logging when it came to questions of multiple use of our rich forest lands.

Unfortunately, each of these valuable resources is managed by a different arm of government. And, since the federally-managed fisheries is so dependent on clean water, there is always a potential source of jurisdictional conflict with the provincially-managed forest industry.

Hopefully, now that a contentious segment of the Fisheries Act has been vetoed by a court decision, both sides will see the light and not let petty differences stand in the way of drafting up another section which would maximize the rights of both sides of the issue.

After all, you and I pay the shot for both sides when it comes to bureaucratic wrangling.

Mark June 28 down on your calendar.

That's when the Cowichan Estuary Preservation Society is holding a meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Cowichan Valley Community Centre.

Since the long-awaited and controversial task force report on the Cowichan River estuary appears on the verge of being released after far too much time in limbo, the meeting should provoke a little fireworks among pro-industrialists and environmentalists in attendance.

Wolf Bauer, a shoreline and estuary specialist from Seattle who has served as a consultant to both the provincial and federal governments as well as industry in this province, will give a slide-illustrated presentation.

And, judging by the lecture Bauer gave in Victoria several years ago, the meeting should be well worth attending.

Anyone heading off to hunt moose in the Prince George-Burns Lake area of British Columbia this fall is reminded that the 1980-81 regulations prohibit the shooting of mature males during the first three weeks of the season, which opens Sept. 15.

Hunters have concentrated on mature male moose in past seasons and created an imbalance in the male-female sex ratio. This, naturally enough, has resulted in less than optimum reproduction.

The new regulations will serve to protect prime breeding stock during the peak of the fall mating season and forms part of a plan to increase moose populations within the province.

The program is based on game management techniques used in other parts of Canada and Europe, where moose populations have been significantly increased in as little as five years.

Fishing for coho in the four to six pound range is red hot in Campbell River waters and fewer numbers of large lunker chinooks are lurking off the Sooke-Victoria waterfront.

Anglers are catching an average of 3.73 fish per boat in the Campbell River region while the local average has been around .57 fish a boat.

Long bombs trip Blues

There is no column in baseball's statistics for assists to the scouts but that's where the credit went Thursday after Central Oregon Phillies long-bombed Victoria Blues 13-9 in their Northwest League meeting at Royal Athletic Park.

Phillies left the bases neat and tidy. Six homers, including three by Juan Samuel, helped the team from Bend to drive in 13 of 15 baserunners.

Blues had no such luck. They stranded 12 of their 21 runners.

Samuel, a 19-year-old second baseman from the Dominican Republic, drove in four runs with his three fence-clearing blasts. Catcher Jerry Willard matched his teammate's rbi total by one swat — a fifth-inning grand slammer. Wayne Ellenberg and Junior Darkis also contributed to the Phils' timely hitting performance.

Samuel gives pounds away to most of his teammates, but his size doesn't detract from his power. Even in pre-game batting practice, he had no problem driving balls over the left field fence.

"It's a tribute to Philadelphia's scouting in Latin American," said manager J.C. Carey. Samuel is one of several Latins uncovered by the parent National League team's scouts.

And perhaps the best, suggested Carey, did not play Thursday.

Shortstop Alfredo Reynolds, scheduled to perform tonight when the teams conclude their two-game series here, "is extremely promising."

The timing of Central Oregon's power was to much for three Blue pitchers, who allowed only five other hits. Normally, nine runs is ample production for victory, but it wasn't the case for Victoria on Thursday.

The game drew 333 fans.

After tonight's game, Blues hit the road for a nine-game swing.

Farmer bat power demolishes Rads

And, when the dust had cleared, Farmers had bashed out 14 hits to chalk up a 15-5 Victoria Cosmopolitan Senior Baseball League victory over Capital Radiators.

Every player on the winning team has collected at least one hit and all but winning-pitcher Terry Adams had scored a run.

City drivers right at top in sports car standings

Ten drivers from the Victoria Motor Sports Club are running in the top four of their respective classes after four of 12 races making up the International Conference of Sports Car Club season.

Bill Okell holds down two places, third in "E" improved production sports cars and fourth in "E" production sports cars.

Two others — Marilyn Smith ("D" improved sedans) and David Whiteley ("E" sports racing) — occupy third place while Bill Thow ("F" improved production sports cars) and Larry Sandham ("C" improved sedans) are fourth in class.

The ICSCC series continues this weekend at Westwood in Coquitlam, goes to Seattle International Raceway June 28-29 and comes to Victoria's Western Speedway July 5-6.

Portland Raceway will be the stopping point the following weekend and competitors will return to Western's road circuit for the Victoria Challenge II, July 18-19.

Ralph Racine 'improving'

HAMILTON (CP) — Lightweight boxer Ralph Racine, seriously injured in a May title fight with Gaetan Hart in Montreal, has been transferred to the rehabilitative ward at Chedoke Hospital.

Racine, 24, was described in good condition with improved speech and mobility.

Doctors removed a blood clot from his brain two days after the fight. He remained in a coma for three more days.

Burnside bowlers click

Ivy McLeod and Marg Atherton topped the women's pairs competition for the Baker Trophy which ended Thursday at Victoria West Lawn Bowling Club.

The Burnside duo defeated Sue Belton and Agnes Davies of Vic West 15-13 while Jan Roth and Gladys Court of Oak Bay collected "B" laurels with a 19-18 decision over Flora Martin and Eleanor Jarvis of Burnside.

Alfred and Fred Sallis and Hilda Haynes of Victoria edged clubmates Bert Bennett, Harold Nutton and Jennie Bennett 17-16 in the Findlay Trophy mixed triples competition at the same club. Paul Jenkins, Rae Martin and Norm Mati placed third while George Parish, Flora Martin and Edna Messum were fourth.

'Good wood' helps Builders do the job

Juan de Fuca Builders put some heavy hitting to good use Thursday, defeating Labatts 6-3 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

Len Banner led the 13-hit attack with four hits in four trips as the Builders survived six errors and an 11-hit Labatt offence.

Builders were trailing 3-1 after five innings but tied it up in the sixth on a single by Lee Putney, a triple by Banner and a single by Ron Fedosenko.

In the seventh, Builders came up with three runs on a single by Steve Pidwerbiski, a double by Terry Barwis, a double by Putney and a single by Banner.

In Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League action at Hyacinth Park, Pam Jones chalked up another great pitching performance to guide Island Dryco Breakers to victory.

Jones threw a two-hitter, striking out eight batters and yielding only one walk, as Breakers downed Strathcona Stingers, 6-1.

In the other game, Victoria Athletics topped Vidalin Construction, 9-4.

Jones, now 13-0, had a no-hitter going until the sixth inning when Donna Triplett and Vicky Walker hit successive singles.

Carol Newcombe scattered nine hits and Maureen Cockrill drove in three runs to spark the Athletics.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Knowles Realty bunched six runs into the first inning and then held on for a 9-7 Heywood Men's League decision over Strathcona Hotel.

Don Frampton led Knowles with three hits to drive in three runs and Jim Tarbuck had three hits for Strathcona.

In Macdonald Men's League play, Gary Arnold bashed a game-winning home run as James Bay Inn edged Saints 3-2 and Mayfair Insurance blanked Rebels 9-0 at Macdonald Park.

At Topaz Park, Lakehill Meats edged Prairie Inn 12-11 in a Lower Island Association intermediate "B" women's league game.

Annie Cadby to try it again

Louis Lindholm and the crew of his Swan 44 Annie Cadby are busy these days preparing for a second run at the Victoria-Maui race which gets under way on Saturday, June 28.

In the last Victoria-Maui — which is raced every other year — Annie Cadby lost her mast. Louis and his crew want to make it to Lahaina this time with everything intact and counting.

With Louis will be his wife and son, Helen and Marshall; Malcolm Anderson, Bob Simson, Phil Huggett, Doug Taylor-Lee and Tony Raymond.

The only other Victoria entry in the 2,310-mile race will be the navy's ketch HMCS Oriole, skippered by Cmdr. Bill Walker. Affectionately known as the "people's boat," her well-wishers are hoping she'll get the strong winds she needs to keep her moving well.

Bill and his crew have done a fine job of tuning her and she handled beautifully when some of us were lucky enough to be taken out on an evening sail just before Swiftsure.

This is the eighth Victoria-Maui race, co-sponsored by the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club and the Lahaina Yacht Club. Lt-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving will be aboard Ron Cliff's pleasure cruiser Sea Q to fire the starting gun on June 28. The start line will be between Sea Q and Brotchie Ledge. There will be 37 boats in the Hawaii-bound fleet, racing in three divisions. The first boats will get their gun at 10 a.m., the next two starts being 10 and 20 minutes later.

Other boats that will bear watching are John Buchan's Chance 54 Glory of the Seattle Yacht Club; "Wink" Vogel's Dream Machine out of Royal Van (a Jones 44, she was third in her division and 29th overall in Swiftsure); John Arens' Tomahawk from the Balboa Yacht Club in Newport Beach, Calif. (She won her division in Swiftsure and came seventh over-all); John Long's Indomitable from Royal Van; and the C and C 61 Triumph, owned by brain surgeon E.B. Diethric of Scotsdale, Arizona.

Peter Keate's Abraxas II of Royal Van. will act as the communications ship, passing on daily positions in order to keep people back home posted on what is happening. Oriole will be her backup.

The United States Laser nationals began in Seattle on Thursday and are continuing through to Sunday. The Royal Victoria Yacht Club is well-represented by Wendy McBride, Rupert Holmes-Smith, Dave Hingley and Mike Turner. To qualify, they had to place in the top 20 of at least four Laser events this year.

Brett Willetts of Vancouver retained his championship title when the B.C. Fireball championships were raced at Royal Vic on the weekend. With Brent Foxall as crew he sailed two firsts, a second and two third finishes for a total of 9.5 points.

Bob Britten and Rupert Holmes-Smith of Royal Vic came second with a total of 16.5 points, having won two races, placed second, then fourth and ninth.

In third spot with 18.75 points were Mike Miles and Mike Clements of Vancouver.

The next big event on the Fireball calendar is the Western Canadian championships, July 11-13, to be hosted by the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

RVYC will have series racing again on Wednesday, starting at 6:30 p.m. Because of protests, this week's results are not yet available. Last week, however, Fleetwood, owned by Doug Hemphill and Dave Richardson, was the overall winner in the division for larger Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats. She edged Bruce Kenning's Arkle and Bob Van Den Driessche's Emeraire. The first three boats in smaller PHRF competition were Vidas' Stukas' Jan, Barry Wilton's Harmony and Bruce Klaver's Wings.

Results of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club's 48-miler around Salt Spring Island and back on the weekend are still being sorted out and will be available next week.

Stephanie Steel is arranging a sortie around Sooke Harbor for members of the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club this Sunday, concentrating on the Anderson Cove area. At 9 a.m. members will meet at the Helmcken-Highway parking lot, travel via Sooke Road, past the Ensign down to Gillespie and along East Sooke Road. For further information phone Stephanie at 656-3741.

Conveyor belts instead of rail to move coal?

By JAKE BANKY

A consortium of engineering firms is studying a new approach to taking coal out of the Sukunka region of northeastern B.C., Socred MLA Jack Davis revealed Thursday.

Instead of moving the coal by rail, they are examining the possibility of using a series of massive conveyor belts, Davis said.

He expects the engineers will be ready to put a proposal before government in the near future.

At present the provincial government is committed to spending up to $300 million to build the 115-kilometre Anzac rail spur that would bring coal out to the CNR main line.

This is a crucial component of the infrastructure needed to back up the proposed multi-billion-dollar coal deal with Japan, now under negotiation.

Davis, himself an engineer, said the conveyor belt system could be built along the same route, for half the capital cost of the Anzac line and the operating costs would be far lower.

The idea is not new. Davis said conveyor belts have been used successfully in other parts of the world to move ore and other bulk materials long distances.

The Japanese have done a great deal in conveyor technology, he said. A Japanese-built conveyor system in Saudi Arabia has been operating for five years, moving salt for a distance equivalent to the Anzac route.

The system, as envisioned by Davis, would be a series of 10-mile-long endless belts, driven over rollers by electric motors.

The belts would be trough-shaped so the coal would not spill out.

They would be protected by a light structure along the full length of the route, with a walkway alongside the belt for maintenance purposes. The protective structure would also house the hydro transmission cables that would power the big motors.

The entire system would be fully automated, requiring a minimum of employees to operate it. In case of trouble on the line it would shut down automatically. The coal would move along the belts at about 10 miles per hour.

This, said Davis, is the technology of today while railways, by contrast, are the technology of the last century.

One great advantage of the conveyor system is it is far more flexible than a rail line, taking grades and curves that the railway engineers would have to avoid, Davis said.

"It wouldn't require tunnels, for example. You could go around or over a problem area much more easily with a conveyor belt."

The extensive tunnelling required on the Anzac line has raised the fear of massive cost overruns on the project.

Davis, who has held the transport portfolio in the Bennett government, said he hopes his former cabinet colleagues will take the conveyor belt proposal seriously.

"The government may really want an alternative to a big cost overrun on rail. This (conveyors) is a possibility which, if they are not already assessing it, they should be. They'll be getting proposals along this line very soon."

Davis would not reveal which firms are involved in the consortium although he said they are all British Columbian. Their engineers have just concluded an on-site survey of the route, he said.

He suggested the Japanese, with their experience in conveyor technology, might be interested in becoming involved in such a project, particularly since coal carried on the conveyor belt would be destined for Japan.

In the legislature Thursday, the opposition tried unsuccessfully for the fourth day in a row to pry loose some official figures on the projected cost of shipping northeast coal and the price being offered the Japanese.

"While coal companies are negotiating a deal with the Japanese, the public of B.C. is left in the dark on whether we'll be paying a subsidy to export coal out of the northeast," NDP MLA Gary Lauk protested.

Lauk claimed the Japanese steel industry will have to pay between $80 and $85 a tonne for the northeast coal, well above the $72 a tonne estimated by industry sources.

The former NDP economic development minister said if the northeast coal project is not handled carefully, it will have a very serious negative effect on the southeast coal region.

CANADA-CHINESE Friendship Association of Victoria is holding its annual fair at Ship Point wharf in the Inner Harbor from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Included in this year's event is show of fashion from 16 minority groups of People's Republic of China. Modelling Yao costume is Virginia Wong (kneeling) while Naida Joe and Jack Tang display Kazakh and Tu costumes respectively.

Bennett opens Folk festival on Monday

A piper will lead Bennett, Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving, local mayors and regional MLAs to the platform at 6.45 p.m.

The premier will make a short speech before declaring Folkfest Victoria under way.

It is sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria.

Folkfest Village in Centennial Square will actually open at 11 a.m. Monday with a two-hour collage of ethnic entertainment.

From 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, at the same site, there will be songs of many lands by members of the Inter-Cultural Association and the Victoria Conservatory of Music, along with Greg Sumner and his Ragtime Rascals.

From 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. there will be entertainment by Princess Mary's Pipe Band and Blue Bird Majorettes.

After the speeches at 6:45 p.m., there will be a two-hour program of dances involving many ethnic groups.

A sunset ceremony will conclude the first day's events.

Tuesday, June 24, is children's day, with programs by many local schools from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Dancing school and adult performers will take over from 4 p.m. until 9 p.m. when sunset ceremonies conclude the second day.

Wednesday, June 25, will be senior citizens and handicapped day. Senior citizens will get free coffee at some kiosks from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Thursday, June 26, will be East Asian day, including Laotian and Indian dancing in the 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. slot. There will also be Asian dancing from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Friday, June 27, is citizenship day. At 2:30 p.m. about 75 people will receive their Canadian citizenship in a public ceremony in the square.

Saturday, June 28, is unity day. There will be a flag ceremony at 1:15 p.m.

Sunday, June 29, is interfaith day with a special church service at 11 a.m.

Monday, June 30, is multicultural women's day with speeches on human rights at 6:45 p.m. as well as a day-long program of dancing.

Tuesday, July 1, marks the climax of thedfestivities with a flypast at 2:30 p.m. and the arrival of Canada's birthday cake at 2:45 p.m. in Centennial Square.

On each day the kiosks open at 11 a.m. and various entertainment continues through the day. Speeches and formal ceremonies take place regularly at 6:45 p.m., except on Saturday, June 28, and Tuesday, July 1.

LRB halts walkout

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board has ordered workers at the Weyerhaeuser pulp mill here to return to their jobs following a day-long walkout Thursday.

Eleven technicians set up a picket line Thursday morning and 450 day-shift workers, members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada refused to cross it.

The technicians are seeking a first contract after joining PPWC. Local union president Gary Worth said the technicians are unhappy with a Weyerhaeuser contract offer that would lengthen their work week and reduce their net pay. Contract talks broke off Wednesday.

Inmate OD suspected

Two Wilkinson Road inmates are back in their cells today after being rushed to hospital Thursday with a suspected drug overdose.

Acting director Harry Bacon said Kirby Martin Hawksworth, 31, and James Melvin Smart, 24, were found unconscious in their cells in separate cell blocks shortly after 4 p.m.

An ambulance took them to Royal Jubilee Hospital where they were admitted for treatment and released some hours later.

Bacon said the men were with a group of inmates exercising in the prison yard and returned to their cells at about 3:30 p.m.

Prison officials have no idea what type of drugs the men may have taken — although the perscription drug tuinol was mentioned as a possibility — or how the drugs came into their possession.

An investigation is continuing.

Smart is serving two years less a day and Hawksworth is in custody awaiting trial. Charges were not specified.

Unions, fisheries agree on salmon prices, wages

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C. announced Thursday that tentative agreement has been reached with the Fisheries Association of B.C. on wage and salmon price agreements covering industry workers.

The union-brotherhood negotiating committee has recommended acceptance of the salmon price agreement and the union tendermen's and shoreworkers' committees have recommended acceptance of the proposed wage agreements for their sections. The workers are to vote on the agreement next week.

The proposed salmon price agreement reduces sockeye prices to 89 cents a pound from the $1.05 a pound of the 1979 agreement. The 1978 sockeye price was 88 cents a pound.

The bumper crop of sockeye expected for Bristol Bay, Alaska, will upset world markets and is responsible for the slash in prices.

Other minimum prices for net-caught salmon will remain unchanged from 1979 with the exception of chum salmon, which will increase to 64 cents a pound from 62 cents. Other prices are: pink salmon, 43 cents; coho, 72 cents; red springs, $1.35; white springs, 62 cents; jack springs, 55 cents each.

The union-brotherhood committee also won an increase in payments to the fishermen's welfare fund to 1.25 cents a pound from 1.1 cents, an increase that will cost the companies about $45,000 in welfare fund contributions.

Tendermen will receive, if the agreement is approved, a general wage increase of between $9.09 and $10.62 a day.

Under the current agreement, tendermen on a Class A vessel under 15 tons receive $101.73 a day, while deckhands on a Class C vessel, 60 tons and over receive $109.11 a day.

Captains, mates and engineers with Transport Canada certificates will receive increased bonuses and there will be general improvements in supplementary wage rates, food allowances and health and welfare benefits.

Shoreworkers will receive a pay increase of 85 cents an hour, while tradesmen will receive between $1.04 and $1.24 an hour during the contract's one-year term.

Base rate under the existing agreement is $7.42 an hour. Shoreworkers, too, will receive improvements in health and welfare benefits.

Union president Jack Nichol said in a news release a settlement by June 19 is unprecedented in the industry's history of wage and price negotiations.

"The rapid and amicable settlement reflects the industry's many ills and the many uncertainties facing the memberships of the two organizations, who face loss of jobs and a poor fishing season. By this settlement, at least one of the uncertainties is lifted, that of potential labor strife."

Need for new faculty doubted

The University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University are lobbying for an engineering school but the Association of Professional Engineers of B.C. has doubts that it is needed, a spokesman for the association said Thursday.

"We have established a task force to study the need for an additional engineering faculty in the province," said Norman Johnson, association president.

"There is never a waiting list at the University of B.C. in engineering the way there is in law or medicine."

The association will report on the need this fall to the Universities Council of B.C., which administrates the publicly-funded universities.

Currently, UBC is the only university in B.C. with an engineering faculty. Johnson said it is essential to have sufficient engineering personnel in B.C. and he does not want to rely on other provinces for it, but he wants to be sure there is a need for additional manpower before going ahead with a new school.

If it's a case where prospective engineers do not want to leave home to go to UBC, Johnson suggested local colleges could provide first and second-year engineering programs.

Dan Lambert, managing director of the association, said if money is left over in the education budget and universities are looking for a place to spend it, the money should go to another faculty such as medicine, not engineering.

Film on sex role choice

The premiere of a new National Film Board feature about role choices for young people will take place for the public Saturday in the Crystal Pool meeting room at 7:30 p.m.

The film, entitled Being Male, was produced by and for a group of 15 and 16 year olds and explores one of the themes chosen to be part of the Interprovincial Youth Conference planned for Victoria next October.

Co-ordinator Dave Nordstrum said the next film in the series, to be shown as soon as it is complete, is called Being Female.

A local youth committee to participate in the conference and to develop more meaningful social roles for young people is underway, said Nordstrum — who can be reached at 383-3364 by anyone interested in participating.

Saanich joins the call for open PCC meetings

The move to open meetings of the Provincial Capital Commission to the public has gathered momentum with the endorsement of Saanich municipal council.

Saanich's decision follows a similar resolution by Victoria city council and request from Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber.

The commission became the centre of controversy recently when the detailed plans for a waterfront convention centre were unveiled, after more than a year of planning behind the scenes with the downtown group, Pan-Pacific Society.

The PCC is to vote Tuesday on the question.

Long term beds ease shortage

New beds for long-term care patients created this month by the opening of a 147-bed facility built by the Central Baptist Church have eased the shortage of acute-care hospital beds.

Last month the hospitals had 67 long-term care patients in acute-care beds, this week only 26 long term care patients are in the hospitals, said Capital Regional District hospital planner Murray Halkett.

The waiting list for long-term care beds has also been reduced from 484 people to 444.

Acute-care beds occupied by extended-care patients also causes a problem for hospitals but two new projects should help to ease that situation soon too.

Ottawa's indifference aids separatism: Smith

Unless the federal government changes its attitude toward the west, it may soon become more respectable to be a B.C. separatist, Education Minister Brian Smith said Thursday.

He told a Victoria Rotary luncheon at The Empress:

"No amount of constitutional talks will help hold the country together unless there is a change of attitude on the part of Ottawa toward the far-flung regions of the country.

"What we (the B.C. government) have tried to stress is that the existence of strong provinces does not mean a weak country.

"A federal government which only has its eyes set on Central Canada will alienate other parts and will produce more widely felt and respectable forms of separatism."

He said both the federal Liberals and the Ontario Conservatives seem determined to champion Central Canada at the expense of the west.

For example, the federal Liberals have not taken action to alleviate a housing shortage in Alberta and B.C. because there is no problem in Ontario and Quebec at the moment.

In Ontario, Tory Premier William Davis is preparing to fight a provincial election by declaring Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed is the unofficial leader of the opposition.

"Alberta is absolutely determined that it is going to enjoy energy prices one-third the cost of those in some countries of Europe, at the expense of Western Canada."

Smith said the present policies of Ottawa and Toronto are adding to the strains of unity.

The constitutional talks scheduled for September can succeed only if the goals are not unrealistic — and only if the vital issues like energy, natural resources and tax dollars are dealt with in a fair way.

Smith said it was unfair for Ottawa to propose an export tax (on natural gas) that would be collected from western provinces only, to the advantage of people living in Central Canada.

Yugoslav pianist wins $10,000

MONTREAL (UPC) — Brilliant, award-winning Yugoslav pianist Ivo Pogorelic has topped another major international competition, winning the $10,000 first prize of the Montreal International Competition for piano.

Pogorelic, 21, also picked up a $500 prize for the best interpretation of Melisma, a tribute to Alban Berg scored for piano and orchestrated by Canadian composer Francois Morel.

Pogorelic's record includes winning the Alessandro Casagrande International Piano Competition in Italy in 1978 as well as five national competitions in Yugoslavia. He trained at the Central Music School and the Tchaikovsky Conservatory in Moscow.

As part of the award, Pogorelic was to perform the Morel piece and Prokofiev's Concerto No. 3 with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra at a concert Tuesday night.

An American, Christopher O'Riley, and a Russian, Vladimir Ovchinnikov, who tied for the $7,500 second place in Sunday's competition will share the billing with Pogorelic.

Bulgaria's Emma Tachmizian placed fourth for $1,500, while Andrei Diev of the Soviet Union won the fifth prize money of $1,000.

Pianists placing sixth to ninth respectively each picked up $500: Boris Petrov, the USSR; Ick-Choo Moon, Canada; Remy Loumbrozo, France; and Ruriko Kikuchi, Japan.

Children's TV package sold

TORONTO (CP) — Galaxie, a daily package of children's programming, will begin broadcasting on Canadian cable television in September as a result of a two-year contract signed by Canadian Satellite Network and TV Ontario.

Galaxie will be a four-hour package of programs aimed at children from three to 12 years of age, the network said in a news release.

TVO will supply the programs and the satellite network will deliver them to any member cable stations that wish to carry the package.

Some of the revenue earned by TVO will be put into production of more children's programming and any profit made by the satellite network will be returned to TVO, the release said.

SUCCESS Through SELF HYPNOSIS

For the past 20 years Mr. DeSilva's method of training in Self Hypnosis has taught thousands of people how to control weight, smoking, memory, and concentration, attitudes, pain, confidence.
One day's training could change your life — look better, be more energetic, increase memory, be more calm, take off pounds, take off inches, lose anxieties, become more creative, sleep better, develop motivation, lose fears, develop salesmanship, develop ESP, control your mind, be healthier, be less depressed — anything that depends on your own efforts.
Hypnosis Works! It releases the dynamic power of the mind. Through DeSilva's seminars his knowledge and voice brings out the hidden powers that lie dormant within you. His methods will give you the power to be or do whatever you want.
What His Graduates Say: Mrs P. C. (housewife): "I want to thank you again for helping me before my surgery — it was a very big help. Thank you again . . ."
Mr. J. L. (retired Naval Officer): "Years of dieting didn't really work for me — so far since attending your class I've lost 22 pounds and intend to lose more . . ."
Mrs. M. S. (school teacher): "The ability to relax through self-hypnosis has aided me tremendously . . ."
Mrs. D. E. (salesperson): "Motivation is the key to success in selling, since your seminar my sales have increased dramatically — I still can't believe it was so easy . . ."
Miss L. T. (nurse): "I feel like a new person since I've stopped smoking. I know now I will want to accomplish much more using self-hypnosis . . ."

ONE DAY SEMINAR — SAT., JUNE 21st
10:30 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. (Registration at the door 10 to 10:30 a.m.). Complete Training is $35.00. (Visa & Master Charge accepted). EMPRESS HOTEL — 'Prince Albert Room' — 721 Government St. Dress comfortable. You may bring a pillow — some people enjoy the experience of hypnosis lying down. 6-18

WIN A summerfunthing

unscramble the clue, then
CRACK THE SAFE!

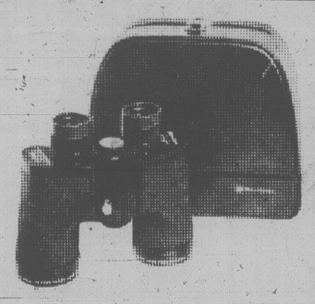

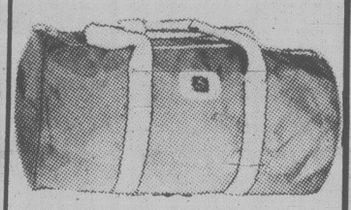

Play it daily and be eligible to win weekly prizes!

THIS WEEK'S PRIZES

8-PIECE FILAGREE PATIO SET	BELL & HOWELL BINOCULARS 8x40 WITH CASE	SPORTS BAG (Five of these to be won)

it's easy and it's fun — just follow the instructions below to crack the safe and win something nice for summer

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated.)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry form.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

Mail your entries to:
"Summerfunthing"
Post Office Box 1390
Victoria, B.C.
V8W 3C4

Victoria Press
2621 Douglas St.
Monday through Friday
8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

A new puzzle will appear each day, but the weekly winners will be selected from all entries submitted for the previous week's puzzles.

To be eligible, your entry must be received by 5:30 p.m. on the Thursday following the week the puzzle was published.
Enter daily, or as often as you wish, but be sure each entry is submitted in a separate envelope.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.
6. The contest is open to all readers of the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Employees of Victoria Press and their immediate families are not eligible to enter.
7. In fairness to all, the Colonist or Times cannot answer questions or respond to phone calls or letters regarding THE SUMMERFUNTHING CONTEST.
8. All winners will be determined by a random draw from all valid entries.

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER — FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER — EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each days password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

Mouseketeers answer the roll call

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — For the first time in more than 20 years, the Mickey Mouse Club roll call showed all present and accounted for Wednesday after four missing Mouseketeers responded to a North American search. One checked in from Winnipeg.

Charley Laney, Larry Larsen, Don Underhill and Ronnie Steiner called Walt Disney Studios on Tuesday after hearing news reports of the search, begun several months ago for a November television show to mark the Mickey Mouse Club Show's 25th anniversary.

The four one-time Mouseketeers were listed as missing when they did not turn up two years ago for festivities honoring the 50th birthday of big Mickey himself.

But with rehearsals for the Mickey Mouse Club special scheduled to begin July 10 and 35 of the original 39 members located, the Mouseketeer manhunt intensified in recent weeks.

"It's incredible, we're all so thrilled," said Missy Sutton, who was in charge of the search and who only Tuesday had bemoaned the failure of her best detective efforts to find the missing quartet.

It turned out three of the four were living in Disneyland's backyard. Larsen, who at about 40 is the oldest Mouseketeer, is an engineer in Orange County, Ms. Sutton said.

Underhill is a credit manager at an Orange County company and Laney is a supermarket manager in the San Diego area.

Steiner checked in from Winnipeg, "and I don't know what he does," Ms. Sutton said.

Steiner and Underhill were among the original Mouseketeers on the show, which was first telecast Oct. 3, 1955. They were only on for one season.

Larsen and Laney joined in 1956, but also hung up their mouse ears after one season.

The five-day-a-week show then was cut from its original hour to a half-hour and continued for two more years before going into reruns. It returned to the air in 1963 and 1975.

The show's two adult Mouseketeers, Jimmie Dodd and Roy Williams, have died. And while many of the younger club members — like the final four to be located — went into other fields.

Among them is Annette Funicello, who launched a singing career and was something of a teen-aged pinup queen in many "Beach Party" movies in the '60s. A few years ago, she returned to television, doing peanut butter ads with her children.

INN hopes there's room

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Just days after Ted Turner's ambitious Cable News Network (CNN) began operations, another U.S. TV news network has been born: Independent News Network (INN).

Turner's CNN cost $40 million or so to launch; INN costs less than a million. CNN offers 24-hours-a-day programming; INN offers 24 minutes. CNN is on cable; INN is over-the-air.

Independent News Network is a fully produced, prime time news program transmitted by satellite to 27 stations across the U.S.

Delivery cost is only about $48 a week, thanks to satellite technology.

Health Minister Rafe Mair couldn't speak to the B.C. Lung Association in Vancouver Thursday night because of illness.

The association was told the minister was suffering from the flu and had to cancel the engagement.

Not Bess Forbes, long-time Times writer.

Bess was out driving the other day when phttt, her car developed a flat.

She bumped and lurched her car into the Metchosin golf club parking lot and inside, asked if she could use the phone to call the auto association.

A chap — he never ever would identify himself — asked if she had a spare and when told, yes indeed, she had, rounded up two other men and promptly proceeded to change the flat.

The trio insisted on anonymity and even came up with a cup of tea for Bess.

The provincial energy ministry has issued a snappy little booklet entitled Fuel Economy and You, designed to help B.C. drivers get the most out of a gallon of gasoline.

"Drive as smoothly and evenly as possible," says the publication. "Pretend there's an egg between your foot and the gas pedal, and a glass of water on the dash.

That wouldn't be the only mess. What do you end up with, automotive omelette or stick-shift souffle?

There's a chuckle up and down press row when Ottawa announces a federal cabinet minister will be coming out to Victoria for some public event.

At least nine times out of ten the cabinet minister begs off, apparently as part of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's policy of paying more attention to the west without actually going there.

Latest no-show was Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc who Wednesday sent his parliamentary secretary to the sod-turning ceremony for the new Marine Technology Centre at Pat Bay.

To be fair, Postmaster General Andre Ouellet showed up in Victoria on schedule this month, a fact that created gasps of astonishment from veteran Ottawa-watchers who had been trying to guess who his substitute would be.

B.C. comptroller-general Lionel Bonnell — the man who's causing a stir in the upper echelons of the B.C. civil service over who's responsible for what in the finance ministry — says he hasn't held the post since the days of W.A.C. Bennett as reported Thursday by the Times.

In fact, says Bonnell, he's only been with the B.C. government for 20 months.

The fuss revolves around Bonnell's refusal to hand over certain of his responsibilities to Deputy Finance Minister Larry Bell because to do so would violate the Financial Control Act.

It's usually management that gets the lumps but shipyard union brass came under attack by one of their own at a Victoria Labor Council meeting Wednesday night.

Dave Higgins, of the Boilermakers union, complained that only his union with 12 members working at Yarrows shipyard asked for an air test following the release of asbestos particles during the recent refit of the Queen of Prince Rupert, now the Victoria Princess.

"The professionals have failed us, the professional business agents," Higgins said.

He said it was only Neil Hindle of his union who pushed for the Workers' Compensation Board to conduct air particle counts.

The postal folk at the legislature have been staggered — literally — by the huge volume of mail on that old chesnut, Sunday shopping.

More than 6,000 letters opposing new shopping legislation have poured into MLAs since the proposed act was introduced April 10 by Attorney-General Allan Williams.

The proposed legislation leaves Sunday and holiday store-opening hours up to local plebiscite.

Opposition to the Holiday Shopping Act has come from Christian fundamentalists but many more protests have come from department store employees and other workers worried that the traditional rest day is threatened.

Birds, sheep, wildflowers find haven on Oak Bay isles

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Off the coast of Oak Bay sit a number of small islands populated now by sea gulls, sheep and radio towers.

The islands range in size from Discovery Island, which is the largest and has a lighthouse, an old homestead and a short stretch of road, to tiny islands like some of the Chain Islets or Alpha Island and others that are little more than perches for sea gulls.

The most obvious evidence of human use is the tall radio towers that sit on the otherwise uninhabited islands.

The Indian band has leased land to several Victoria radio stations to erect transmission towers which are often unwanted in any area near a city.

But the islands' only inhabitants — the wild sheep, sea gulls, cormorants, other small birds and animals and the occasional deer that manages to swim over — don't seem to mind.

Even though the islands are within a 30-minute boat ride of Victoria, they remain virtually unknown and unvisited.

Wildflowers bloom amid rocks

The CRD is interested in them because they are relatively untouched and certainly undeveloped.

Al Lubkowski, a planner working on the View Royal settlement plan, says while the CRD really has no jurisdiction or intent to do anything with the islands, it wants to take a look before irreversible changes occurr.

He admits it might be best to leave the islands completely alone.

But he's concerned some development proposal may sneak up and catch everyone by surprise.

If the region at some time in the future decides it wants the islands, there's the possibility the Songhees might consider some type of land trade.

(Oak Bay, because of an unusual authority granted it years ago, has jurisdiction over ocean and islands within a 1000 feet boundry of the muncipality's shoreline. Consequently islands such as Mary Tod and Staines islands, which are in the same general area as the islands belonging to the Songhees, are controlled by Oak Bay.)

Half of it is held as a provincial park reserve and another eight and a half acres is up for sale.

Years ago the island's lone resident, a Captain Beaumont, built a homestead on the then unclaimed land looking out across a windswept plain to the ocean.

When he died he left the property to the Boy Scouts which sold the property several years ago. Although the buildings are dilapidated, the property is beautiful and certainly private. The property, probably the only part of the islands that will ever be privately owned, is again up for sale with an asking price of $115,000.

The two Chatham Islands have small herds of sheep grazing.

While their efforts distinguish the islands from the others which are overgrown with dense underbrush, a botanist notes that eventually the sheep will cause the island to be treeless.

The sheep are such efficient feeders that they eat any young trees which germinate. When the old trees die, there will be nothing to replace them.

Birds nest in sheltered corners

In case anyone is considering the thought of a tender young Chatham Island lamb dinner — it isn't recommended.

Because of the flock's long-term inbreeding, the sheep may carry tuberculosis.

The islands are sheep heaven most of the time. There are no natural predators and the only force acting against them is dry weather.

Several of the islands are in the province's ecological reserve holdings.

Jemmy Jones, Alpha and the Chain islands have all been designated reserves for different reasons.

Rare species of wildflowers exist on the other two, which also provide excellent examples of subtidal marine life.

The province's ecological reserves were established mainly to protect natural colonies of animal or plant life and to provide areas for scientific studies.

While the public is allowed to visit the reserves, they are not to be thought of as public park land.

Shipyard lays off 40 as new orders dry up

Philbrook's Shipyards in Sidney has laid off 40 employees in the last several months and is retrenching because of a slowdown in the boatbuilding market, president Don Dobie said today.

"We're down from what we normally have," he said, in response to reports that business at Philbrook's was down sharply and it had discharged most of its employees.

Two laid-off employees told the Times that work at Philbrook's had dropped off to a low level after an extremely busy period. No orders for new vessels were on hand, they said.

High interest rates in the U.S. where Philbrook's sells most of its production of pleasure craft are the major factor in the decline, Dobie said.

"We have dealers as far east as Annapolis, Maryland and they say everybody's just holding pat."

The company has had as many as 70 employees working on boatbuilding contracts, but the last major order — four charter fishing boats for Bob Wright's Ucluelet operation — was finished recently and Philbrook's has no new orders for boats.

Its fibreglassing plant was shut down recently for two weeks but the company recently got an order from B.C. Hydro so it will be starting up and some employees will be rehired, Dobie said.

One laid-off employee said the plant was working three crews 24 hours a day at the beginning of the year, but now there is no work at all at the plant.

Dobie also confirmed that the company is pulling out its Bosun's Marina operation, where Philbrook's has built about 25 of the successful 39-foot Fast Passage sailboat design in the last three years.

"We don't have the volume there to support that facility," he said.

Besides boatbuilders and fibreglassers, the company has also laid off mechanics. Service and repair work at Philbrook's is down as well as boatbuilding.

One laid-off worker said seven mechanics quit en masse recently and went on unemployment insurance, where they could earn more money. At Philbrook's they were only getting two days work a week. Dobie said that three or four mechanics were laid off.

"They've got no contracts for new construction," said one former employee. He added that the bad herring fishery this year in B.C. also contributed to the downturn at Philbrook's as fishboat owners have deferred new vessel orders and servicing work.

Ferries kept apart

The B.C. Ferry Corporation has adjusted its summer schedules to ensure ferries don't pass each other in Active Pass.

There was some suggestion when the truck ferry Queen of Alberni went aground last summer that the Alberni had swung wide to avoid another ferry.

The subsequent inquiry revealed this was not the case but ferry officials have decided to avert any possibility of it happening in future.

Under the new schedule, instead of ferries leaving simultaneously from Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen on the hour, departure times at each end are 15 minutes apart.

When a ferry leaves Tsawwassen at 7 a.m., its sister ship won't leave Swartz Bay until 15 minutes later.

City delays decision on taxing for centre

CARSON

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria has delayed making any decision on the best way of soaking the city's business community to pay for the expected deficit on the convention centre.

Last week council was poised to endorse a finance committee recommendation to raise some $272,000 by ceasing the practice of allowing businesses to deduct trade licence fees from their business taxes.

But letters objecting to the move came from former mayor Mike Young, as a partner in the law firm of Straith and Co., the Victoria Bar Association, the Downtown Business Association and several other professionals.

On Thursday finance committee chairman Ald. Frank Carson defended the change with a wealth of statistics, but aldermen deferred a decision until those who objected to the original plan can study the matter further.

Carson said he thought the city was about a year early in imposing the tax change as any deficit incurred during the first start-up year of the convention centre could easily be paid out of general revenues.

"We don't know if we're going to have this," he said, referring to the convention centre project recently put on hold by Finance Minister Hugh Curtis.

The committee was also told that there is in fact no legal basis for the 26-year-old practice of allowing trade licence fees — which range from $100 a year for lawyers and most professions to $1,800 for a main branch of a bank — to be offset against business taxes.

The Municipal Act says this must be done, but Victoria has its own charter and city statute enacted by the legislature.

To specific complaints from lawyers, who protested the loudest about the proposal, Carson asked comptroller Mason Sheldrick to outline the history of the trade licence.

Sheldrick read from 30-year-old bylaws which showed that lawyers — and other professionals, including architects, accountants, engineers, barbers, real estate agents "and other transients" — have had trade licence fees frozen at $100 since 1950.

Was gory slaying planned?

Crown counsel and the defence for a 29 year-old Sidney man charged with first degree murder made summations to the jury in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday.

Mr. Justice Gordon MacKinnon will instruct the jury today before it retires to consider its verdict.

The final addresses ended the nine-day murder trial of Denis Barry McFadden, charged in the knife slaying of 31 year-old Marion Barbara MacKay in her Saanich home March 17.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood told the jury McFadden is not guilty of first degree murder because he did not intend to kill MacKay when he entered her home at her request to fix the plumbing and a broken window.

Premeditation, or planning, must be proven beyond resonable doubt before a jury can find a defendant guilty of first degree murder, he said.

Jurors must remain calm, cool and collected in deliberating — "not withstanding the goriness, the horror, the viciousness, the nastiness of the crime," Owen-Flood said.

McFadden is a dangerous, bad man, but his character is not the issue, he said.

Whether he is a kind and loving husband or whether he is "an absolutely ruthless scum" has nothing to do with the decision.

"If a man is to be convicted he is to be convicted for what he has done, not what he is."

An expert witness says McFadden has an anti-social personality disorder.

Psychiatrist Dr. Alistair Murray does not classify that behavior problem as mental illness, but explained that another school of psychiatry does have that opinion, Owen-Flood contended.

The behavior disorder and the added stress of two seperate police investigations caused McFadden to act in an enraged and violent manner when provoked by MacKay.

MacKay told him she would call his employer and the police and then she pushed him so that he fell against the window in her bedroom, shattering it.

"There was the sound of breaking glass — three sharp shrieks as he went for her with the knife, then silence."

The very fact there were 26 stab wounds indicates a "frenzied, maniacal attack" consistant with the symptoms of his behavior disorder. Evidence found at the scene of the crime also indicates a violent struggle, Owen-Flood said.

It is hard to conceive of McFadden premeditating the crime because his employer, his wife and MacKay's boyfriend knew where he was the night of the tragedy.

His wife testified the butcher knife in his possession was borrowed from her in February to replace some tools confiscated by the police.

Owen-Flood said the question of sexual assault was a "speculative leap" by the Crown.

MacKay was nude when she was found because McFadden had removed her clothes after the stabbing and disposed of them. No one knows for sure what she was wearing, he said.

An autopsey showed no signs of sexual assault, the defence counsel pointed out.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the jury the evidence indicates McFadden knew MacKay lived alone and he coldly and cruelly plotted to sexually assault and then kill her when she resisted his advances.

"If you accept that then we have first degree murder," Lang said.

The defence has presumed that provocation by MacKay triggered his violent temper, but that is not so, Land said.

MacKay did not say she was going to call his employer and the police and she did not push him. Instead, McFadden forced her at knifepoint to remove her clothes and then attempted indecent assault.

The window broke not because McFadden fell against it, but because MacKay smashed it in her struggle to excape. It was MacKay's flesh found on the window sill.

She was pulled back into the room and the location of the blood indicates she was stabbed, not by the window as McFadden testified, but six feet away near the closet.

Lang pointed out that Dr. Murray in his testimony stated that if MacKay had not provoked and pushed McFadden there would not be the same degree of aggressive behavior.

McFadden's evidence is untrue and contradicted by fact and items found inside and outside the room.

Dr. Murray testified he does not believe the accused is telling the truth when he says he cannot remember stabbing MacKay.

McFadden had another knife in his tool box and did not need to take a carving knife with him to the job.

After the murder, McFadden returned to the scene and removed and carefully disposed of her clothes, then put her in a boat at his home until he could dispose of the body, Lang said.

Airplane joyride nets one year

A 20-year-old Deep Cove man who stole a plane from Pat Bay airport May 29 and crash landed it near Cowichan Bay was given a one-year jail term Thursday in Victoria provincial court.

Denis Joseph Robert Chiasson, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty June 3 to one count of theft over $200 and 19 counts of mischief causing wilful damage to other aircraft at the airport. Judge Lorne Pearce remanded Chiasson in custody until Thursday so that a pre-sentence report could be prepared.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said Chiasson stole a Piper Cherokee Six, valued at $30,000 and belonging to Flight Centre Victoria charter services, and flew it to a field near Cowichan Bay. Smith said there was three to four hours of fuel in the tanks when Chiasson took the plane and that the crash landing caused an estimated $26,100 damage.

Chiasson apparently damaged the 19 other planes trying to gain entry and the total damage has been estimated at $5,000 by the owners.

Chiasson told Sidney RCMP officers he had been drinking at the Golden Bear Tavern, 2280 Beacon Avenue in Sidney, until about 11 p.m. the night before and somehow wandered over to the airport. There, he tried to start a number of planes.

RCMP said that in one case, if Chiasson had pushed "just one more button," the aircraft would have taken off straight for two other planes which were fully loaded with fuel.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said alcohol and drugs were problems of his client but that Chiasson had beaten the latter. He said Chiasson has said himself he would have difficulty coping in society if released and requested a forestry camp setting and assistance with his alcohol problem. MacKenzie also stated his client had no money whatsoever to make restitution.

The only previous conviction for Chiasson was in New Brunswick on March 19, 1980, when he was given a 30-day jail term for breaking and entering.

"Anyone who did what you did with that plane obviously has some ability," Pearce said to the young man.

But the judge also noted there was approximately $31,000 damages done and said that if Chiasson could have made some kind of restitution, the appropriate sentence would have been six or seven months in jail.

"But there's obviously no hope in this case," Pearce observed.

He handed out the one-year term on the theft charge and recommended that the sentence be served in a forestry camp or at Alouette River where there is a treatment program for alcoholics.

On all the mischief counts, Pearce handed out a concurrent, 30-day sentences and placed Chiasson on a year's probation.

Farm history on show

The Saanich Historians' Artifacts Society will hold its second annual open house from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the 23-acre museum farm.

To reach the farm, turn east from the Pat Bay Highway at the Island View traffic light then north on Lochside Drive.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis will officially open the Willard Michell Building, which is named after the founder of the museum collection, at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The Vancouver Island Model Engineers Society will have steam trains running and carrying passengers on their raised track.

For hungry visitors, there will be home-made bread and butter, home-made jam, peanut butter or honey, as well as ice-cream and cold drinks.

Among several displays will be a Parklands School model of the farm property and a model of the society's proposed Pioneer Memorial Chapel.

The Central Saanich New Horizons' landscaping group will have their lawns and gardens in order, as well as their latest production of native cedar picnic tables.

There is no entrance charge.

IF YOU SMOKE.

In the years since the criticism against smoking first appeared, many people have given up cigarettes. But many more people haven't.

And that's who we'd like to talk to. That even larger group of people who are smokers today.

If you're a smoker, you've probably heard the charges leveled against smoking. Chances are you even tried to do something about it—like trying several of those cigarettes that take out everything including the taste.

If you're like a lot of other smokers, you probably went right back to your old brand, and concluded that a good-tasting cigarette for a contemporary smoker has never been invented.

Well, if that's the case, you haven't tried Vantage.

Vantage cuts down substantially on what you may not want, without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavour you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the only cigarette of its kind you can smoke, but it may well be the only one you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

So, if you are a smoker, but would like to cut down on certain things, Vantage is one cigarette you should seriously consider.

Before the judge

A 25-year-old woman, described by her lawyer as a "textbook addict," was given a six-month jail term Thursday in Victoria provincial court.

Heather Ruth Biggs, also known as Griffin, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to 16 counts of uttering forged documents, 10 counts of impersonation, and one count each of forgery, use of a stolen credit card, and theft under $200.

Judge Lorne Pearce handed out the six-month term for the forgery conviction and gave concurrent terms of six months each on all other counts. Biggs had originally been charged with 17 counts of forgery, 16 counts of uttering, 11 counts of impersonation, five counts of using a stolen credit card, and one count of theft. Crown counsel Robert Mulligan entered stays of proceedings on all other charges.

The offence occurred in the fall of 1979 and in the spring of 1980, when Biggs was facing court appearances on the earlier charges.

Defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming, who said others were involved in most of the offences, described his client as a good student who quit in Grade 12 at Nanaimo Senior Secondary School in 1971.

He said Biggs began at the age of 13 or 14 with soft drugs such as marijuana and then got into heavier drugs, including heroin, and alcohol by the age of 17.

He also said Biggs was the mother of a 4½-year-old girl but was facing a legal custody fight next week concerning her child.

The impersonation charges stemmed from the use of identification in the names of Lori Wagner and Patricia Goode to write cheques varying in amounts from $28.08 to $154.37. In one instance, she used the identification to open a bank account.

On April 12, Biggs stole a wallet and contents while at a beauty salon at 915 Douglas and credit cards from the theft were used to run up bills at six Greater Victoria restaurants.

Judge Lorne Pearce said Biggs was an intelligent, attractive young person but cautioned that if the courts were lenient, other young people may consider it worth the risk to try what Biggs did.

He placed the young woman on two years probation and ordered her to accept drug and alcohol counselling, specifically the program offered at the Brannen Lake institution in Nanaimo.

Two escapers from lower Vancouver Island jails who were caught near Hope when their stolen car went into a ditch were given additional jail terms.

Raymond Gordon Park, 20, who was unlawfully at large from Wilkinson Road jail, was given a further four months after pleading guilty to possession of stolen property.

David Wallace Pearson, 19, unlawfully at large from Jordan River forestry camp, received an extra 30 days when he pleaded guilty to the same charge. He was given a concurrent, six-day sentence for possession of marijuana.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said the pair were in a 1969 Valiant which had been stolen from the Lower Mainland when it went into the ditch along the Trans Canada Highway. When police arrived on the scene, the pair fled into bushes but was flushed out by a tracking dog.

Two youths involved in a noisy confrontation with Saanich police Wednesday night were fined by Pearce.

Victor Powell Margetish, 20, of 2668 Dowler Place, pleaded guilty to obstructing a peace officer, causing a disturbance by shouting, and wilful damage, was fined $300 on the first count, $50 on the second, and given a suspended sentence, six months probation, and ordered to make restitution to Saanich municipality on the third.

Michael Erwin Schon, also known as John Michael Schon, of 3640 Doncaster, pleaded guilty to resisting a peace officer, causing a disturbance by shouting, and being a minor in possession of liquor. He was fined $300 on the first count and given a suspended sentence, six months probation and ordered to accept any Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society counselling as directed on the last two counts.

Saanich police were called about noisy youths in the 4200-block Morris Drive about 11:55 p.m. and were arresting Schon for being in a state of intoxication in a public place when Margetish jumped on the back of police officers. When police tried to break up a fight between two others, Margetish told officers to "leave them alone, they're only juveniles." When ordered to step out of the way, Margetish refused.

As Schon was being arrested, he banged the police vehicle with his fist and then tried to kick his way out of the back of the car. Police also found beer in his possession, Mulligan added.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Brook Robert Kennedy, 21, of Vancouver, $450; William John Derks, 19, of 2144 Bradford, $450; Stuart Alexander Bartlett, 18, of 1836 San Juan Ave., $300; and Douglas Carl Fallas, 19, of 376 Walter, $200.

Ship killed sperm whale?

LONG BEACH (UPC) — A 12-ton sperm whale found dead on a beach in the Pacific Rim National Park on the west coast of Vancouver Island probably died after being run over by a ship, a federal naturalist said Thursday.

"The whale had a massive wound in its back, probably caused by the keel of a heavy ship, or more likely, the ship's propellor," said Barry Campbell, a naturalist with Parks Canada.

"The spine had been severed and the spinal nerve cord was exposed."

Campbell said there had been extensive severing and damage to the whale's back muscles and it was unlikely the creature would have been able to swim after being wounded.

"Indications are that the whale was dead when it washed upon the beach," he said. "Tests will have to be carried out to determine when it died, but it could have not lived long after receiving a massive wound like that."

Campbell said the carcass was that of a male sperm whale measuring 32 feet in length and weighing approximately 12 tons.

The skull and the jawbone will be removed by federal naturalists for testing and and pathological examination, he said.

"The whale is on a sandbar exposed to the elements, so when decomposition starts, it will attract large numbers of eagles, hawks, seagulls, crows and other birds," Campbell said.

"The silting action of the sea and sand will do the rest by gradually burying the carcass. In time, the whale will completely disappear."

Contract Bridge — B. Jay Becker

You open One Heart and partner responds Three Notrump. What would you bid now with each of the following four hands.

1. ♠ AJ5 ♡ AK862 ◇ 10 ♣ 9763
2. ♠ Q6 ♡ KQ954 ◇ KJ82 ♣ AJ
3. ♠ K93 ♡ AQJ73 ◇ A85 ♣ QJ
4. ♠ K83 ♡ KJ8643 ◇ — ♣ AQ94

1. Pass. The three notrump response indicates 16 or 17 high-card points, notrump distribution (probably 4-3-3-3 but possibly 4-4-3-2), and adequate strength in all three of the unbid suits.

You can thus deduce that your side has either 28 or 29 high-card points. Since only 26 points are usually needed to produce nine tricks in notrump, the extra 2 or 3 points your side has will probably offset the unsuitability of your hand for notrump play. Furthermore, other than a pass, there's no suitable call you can make over three notrump.

2. Four diamonds. There is no question that there's a slam in the offing, but whether the best slam contract lies in hearts, diamonds or notrump is uncertain at this point.

In general, hands that have a combined total of 33 high-card points should be bid to a slam. However, this does not mean that you can't make a slam with fewer than 33 points. Distributional factors and long suits are often adequate substitutes when you're 3 or 4 points short of the desirable 33 high-card points.

3. Six notrump. Here the issue is clear-cut. With 33 high-card points accounted for, plus the value of your five-card heart suit and the possiblity that partner may have more than 16 points, twelve tricks are virtually certain.

4. Four clubs. You final destination is uncertain at this point. Obviously, notrump is undesirable, and the only real question is which suit to bid over three notrump.

Despite your modest high-card values, a slam is far from impossible. If partner's 16 or 17 points are in the right places, twelve — or even thirteen — tricks may come waltzing home. But if partner's high cards are in the wrong places — with wasted strength in diamonds — there may be only a game in the cards.

It is better to bid four clubs than four hearts. Partner could easily have a doubleton heart and four clubs to the K-J or K-10, in which case a slam in clubs would become feasible. Your final decision depends on what partner does over four clubs.

Brokers get forgery warning

Canadian Press

Superintendent of brokers Rupert Bullock has issued a warning to stockbrokers that charges will be laid whenever there is evidence that free B.C. Resources Investment Corp. share applications were forged.

The warning follows an investigation by Prince George RCMP of the possibility that an employee of Midland Doherty Ltd. forged the names of a number of applicants for the free shares distributed by the provincial government last year.

This allowed the firm to keep the blocks of five shares instead of returning them to the government once the deadline for applying for the shares passed.

No charges were laid.

The warning was contained in Bullock's weekly notice of his department's decisions and actions.

Ian Falconer of Vancouver, Midland Doherty's regional vice-president, said he did not know anything about the incident.

"It must have been of an extremely minor nature or it would have been brought to my attention," he said.

Bullock said in his notice that when the completed BCRIC form was sent back to the government it contained a stamped guarantee by Midland Doherty that the applicant and the recipient of the shares were the same person.

The incident involved a legitimate application and shares that were picked up without the applicant's knowledge.

It began in March, 1979 when Maureen Frederickson of the Prince George area filled out an application for her five free shares at the local office of Midland Doherty.

She subsequently moved to Manitoba and didn't return to pick up her shares before Sept. 30, the deadline for share pickup. Eventually the deadline was extended to Dec. 31.

Prince George regional Crown counsel Peter Ewert said on Oct. 5 an employee for the brokerage firm apparently signed Frederickson's name to the application form certifying she had picked up her shares.

This form was sent to the government, which then had it on record that she had received her shares.

But some time before the end of the year, Frederickson wrote to the B.C. government requesting that her shares be sent to her new address in Manitoba.

She was told that the official records indicated she already had picked up her shares.

In February, she filed a complaint with the RCMP.

We'll blow up pipe: Indians

CALGARY (CP) — Frustrated Indians in northern British Columbia will "blow up" the proposed Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline unless the federal government meets their demands for compensation, George Manuel, president of the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, said Thursday.

"It's death to my people if the pipeline goes through and they don't meet the demands of the Indian people," said Manuel.

He told a news conference the federal government has constantly rejected Indians' demands for monetary and other concessions to limit the impact of the proposed pipeline on the Indians' traditional way of life. And unless the government changes its ways, Indians will resort to violence.

"I think we have used every peaceful avenue and none of the avenues have worked," Manuel said. He claimed to have the support of B.C. Indians in threatening to blow up the pipeline — particularly the younger Indians who are frustrated by the government's efforts to build the line without regard to the Indians' welfare.

Manuel said he supports the recommendations of the recently-released Mair report on the pipeline's impact on communities along the 7,680-kilometre right-of-way in northeastern B.C. But judging by its past actions, he said, the federal government will ignore the Mair report.

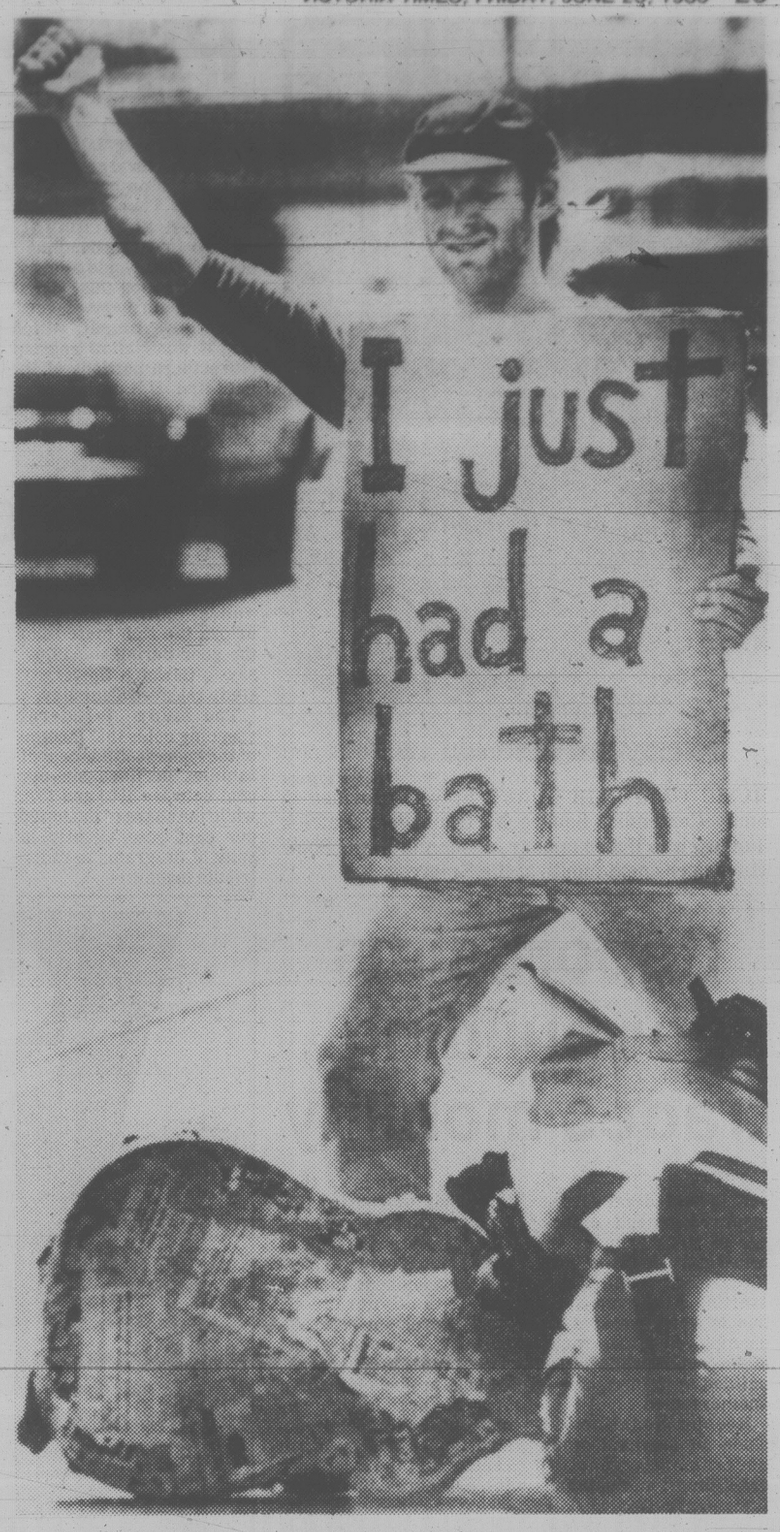

Commissioned by the Northern Pipeline Agency, the report by W. Winston Mair recommends comprehensive socio-economic and land studies of the proposed route and Indian involvement in compensation plans.

As well, it says additional land should be given to native people and they should be compensated for loss of income due to the pipeline.

Manuel said B.C. Indians struggled unsuccessfully for years to have the federal government recognize their concerns. He said the Indians want Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd., the Calgary-based sponsor of the $22-billion project, to buy land chosen by Indians for reserves.

The Indians also want the government to set aside at least 160 square kilometres of land in northeastern B.C. to be guaranteed as an Indian hunting and trapping area.

Manuel is to meet with federal Economic Development Minister Bud Olson today to discuss the Mair report.

$70M deal set for Island mine

Weldwood of Canada Ltd. of Vancouver and Luscar Ltd., of Edmonton, are prepared to spend $70 million on a coal mine near Campbell River if a sales contract can be negotiated with a Danish firm, company officials said today.

The mine will only go ahead if a sale is made and provincial government agrees to the necessary permits.

Colin Warner, Weldwood's vice-president of finance, said the mine has been in the works for several years but now the anticipated cost has been revised upwards to $70 million from $60 million, due to inflation.

The mine will produce about one million tons of thermal coal a year.

Weldwood had earlier tried to persuade B.C. Hydro to establish a thermal power plant at the site, burning the coal, but the crown corporation is not interested at this time.

The selling price to the Danish firm is still being debated.

"If we get the price we are trying to negotiate, it will be profitable."

The coal operation would represent only about 10 per cent of Weldwood's business, and the company has no plans for other diversification outside the forest industry, said Bryce P. Page, the company's executive vice-president for marketing.

Page said Weldwood and its partners in Cariboo Pulp and Paper, of Quesnel, are increasing the capacity of Cariboo's pulp mill to 900 tons a day from 800.

Search continuing for Bella Coola plane

Two Buffalo fixed-wing aircraft and two Labrador helicopters resumed the search today for a Cessna 172 with two men aboard missing since Wednesday on a flight from Bella Coola to Rivers Inlet and back.

The plane left Bella Coola on the two-hour flight at 5 p.m. Wednesday and was thought to have been seen circling around Rivers Inlet an hour later.

The Pacific Rescue Centre handled a total of 23 incidents in the 24-hour period that began at 8 a.m. Thursday, 19 of which were marine-related.

On Thursday afternoon a canoe with two people in it overturned off Gonzales Island. They were rescued by a passing pleasure craft, the Trial Isle, and taken ashore. Also involved were the national defence vessel Firebrand, a Canadian Coast Guard vessel and a pilot boat.

There was a fire aboard a fishing vessel at Boat Cove on Lasqueti Island on Thursday evening which began with an explosion. The boat is still floating but completely gutted.

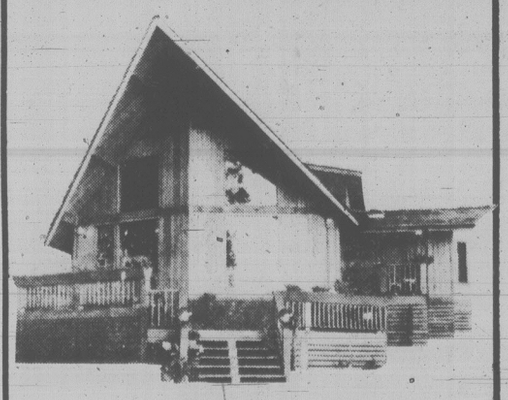

A 35 to 40-foot fishing vessel, the Early Dawn, caught fire at dockside in Harriet Bay on Quadra Island.

The master of the Korean deepsea vessel Boo Yong, which was anchored in English Bay, suffered an eye injury on Thursday and was airlifted to Vancouver by helicopter.

Sixteen-year-old Dena Sutton of Port Alice was airlifted by helicopter to Port Hardy. She had been on a school trip at Nells Bight, near the tip of Cape Scott and was believed to be suffering from appendicitis.

Pipeline design cost terms settled

OTTAWA (CP) — U.S. sponsors of the long-delayed Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline finally agreed on how to share design costs Thursday, just as the Trudeau government was warned that the deadline for a decision that would allow a start on construction this year is less than a month away.

The government, which has said it won't allow construction on southern portions of the line until the U.S. provides assurances the entire multi-billion-dollar project can be financed, has yet to comment on the U.S. development.

The agreement Thursday in the U.S. covers only the estimated $500-million cost for planning, engineering and designing the 1,180-kilometre Alaska section — not actual construction.

And senior energy department officials in Washington refused to say whether they believe Ottawa now has the assurances it desires.

"We have no assurances one way or another how it will turn out," said Les Goldman, assistant energy secretary for international affairs.

However, Goldman contended the statement fills in "an essential piece of the puzzle ... to come up with a significant financing package" for the project.

During a visit to Washington last month, Economic Development Minister Bud Olson said he wants to see "agreements establishing at least in general terms, the respective roles to be played by the sponsors, the producers — and possibly the state of Alaska — in the management and financing of actual construction" of the pipeline.

Meanwhile, Foothills Pipe Line (Yukon) Ltd., the Canadian sponsor, told the Commons northern pipeline committee Thursday a cabinet decision is needed by July 15 so a stretch of the line can be built through the mountains of British Columbia before bad weather sets in.

Robert Pierce, president and chief executive officer of the company, also warned that if there are any further delays, Foothills will be forced to turn its attention to other projects.

This would mean substantial delays in getting the whole pipeline built.

The project is intended to move natural gas from northern Alaska to the lower 48 states. Foothills has been trying to get a head start on some southern portions of the line so it can export Canadian gas to the U.S. in the interval before Alaskan gas can get there.

Tax policy no help to poor

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's tax and spending policies helped the rich more than the poor during the 1970s, says a Carleton University study released Thursday.

The study of federal spending notes that income of the poorest 40 per cent of families declined six per cent between 1969 and 1978 while the share of the top 20 per cent rose slightly in spite of programs to redistribute income.

In 1969, the poorest 40 per cent of families received 15.3 per cent of income but only 14.3 per cent in 1978. The top fifth took in 42.6 per cent of income in 1978 compared with 42 per cent in 1969.

The study says that in calculating income shares, government transfer payments such as unemployment insurance, family allowance, manpower training allowances and old age security benefits were included, all of which rose substantially during the 1970s.

But it says these increases were not sufficient to allow the incomes of lower-income families to rise as rapidly as the incomes of middle- and upper-income families.

The report, Spending Tax Dolars, is the first of an annual series prepared by the university's school of public administration.

It notes that 1971 tax-reform legislation was touted by the Liberal government as a way to redistribute income, but concludes the changes "had virtually no significant impact" in altering the shares.

Any benefits tended to be offset by the growth of tax incentives and loopholes — known as tax expenditures — such as registered homeowners savings plans and registered retirement savings plans.

Airport bus crash kills one, hurts 10

TORONTO (CP) — A 60-year-old Manitoba woman was killed and 10 others were injured Thursday night when an airport express bus swerved on the rain-slick Gardiner Expressway and hit an overpass in downtown Toronto.

Dead is Ruth Margaret Bacon of St. Boniface.

Violet Kennedy, 63, and Thelma Rodgers, 60, both of Winnipeg received serious injuries and Michelle Pryor of Houston, Tex., wife of infielder Greg Pryor of the American League Chicago White Sox, was treated for minor injuries.

Report aims for building trades mobility

OTTAWA (CP) — A report to the federal government recommends a package of steps to make the construction industry labor force more mobile, thus averting a chronic situation in which workers are unemployed in one region of the country while jobs go unfilled or to foreigners in another region.

Recommendations include an overhaul of the government's mobility grant program, tax breaks for construction workers who finance their own room, board and travel away from home, and standardization of provincial apprenticeship and training programs, trades licensing and certification rules.

The report made public Thursday also recommends a review of a Quebec law restricting the movement of Quebec workers inside the province and non-Quebec workers into the province's construction work sites. And it says a worker supply-and-demand information system is badly needed.

The report was prepared by a government-financed joint labor-management study group on mobility in the construction industry, an offshoot of one of 23 industry study groups which reported to the government in 1978.

The report describes a chronic boom-and-bust situation in the industry that compounds general employment instability among construction workers due to the cyclical, seasonal nature of their work.

What happens is that thousands of construction workers are hired for massive projects on the scale of the James Bay hydro electric development in Quebec or the Syncrude oil sands development in Alberta. The spin-off effect poses problems.

Such projects create a spin-off surge in commercial and institutional construction in nearby urban centres, but the local work force has dried up because of the so-called mega project. So workers from elsewhere are needed to build the schools, homes, offices, shops and manufacturing facilities that suddenly are needed.

The report says there is little problem attracting thousands of workers to the massive projects because generous incentives such as paid room, board and travel, recreational facilities and occasional trips home are provided.

However, for smaller projects with few incentives, workers are finding it doesn't pay to leave their home and family even temporarily to take a job.

The study group did some comparisons of workers who stay home unemployed and those who relocate to work. In one hypothetical situation based on real figures, a Halifax man who took a two-month job in Edmonton came out only $7 richer than a man who stayed in Halifax collecting unemployment insurance benefits. The man who took the job had to pay travel and living expenses.

Canada, Mexico sign ag pact

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Canada and Mexico sign an agreement today on agricultural co-operation that should boost short-term Canadian grain sales and result in technical assistance in areas such as hog production.

Trade Minister Ed Lumley, who is heading the delegation of Canadian business and government representatives, told Mexican journalists Thursday that Canada expects to be selling Mexico more wheat, rapeseed and skim milk powder and will also look at the possibility of exporting corn and black beans.

No specific targets have been set, he said, but they will be worked out this autumn during a visit to Canada by the Mexican minister of commerce, Jorge de la Vega Dominguez. Mexico has indicated it wants an additional 200,000 tons of wheat in the coming year.

"We want to help Mexico meet its goals and there are no conditions attached," Lumley told a news conference, adding that the agreement falls under a deal signed in Ottawa by Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillio providing Canada with 50,000 barrels of oil a day in exchange for technical co-operation.

Union leader dies

MONTREAL (CP) — Gerard Picard, former journalist and well-known union organizer, died here Thursday. He was 73.

Picard was elected president in 1934 of the central committee of Catholic Unions, and between 1946 and 1958 was president of the Confederation of Catholic Workers in Canada, forerunner of the powerful Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU). He was a former president of the CNTU's Montreal central council.

Picard also was a member of the Quebec superior council of labor and professor of industrial relations at Laval University.

Camera uncovers corpses of two Val d'Or miners

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP) — Rescue workers using a miniature camera have spotted the mud-caked bodies of two of the eight miners trapped underground in the Belmoral gold mine, a Quebec provincial police spokesman said today.

Const. Jacques Letourneau said the bodies were discovered late Thursday in a ventilation shaft near the bottom of the 150-metre deep mine after the camera — which is hooked to a television monitor — was lowered to the area through a narrow hole.

"They were completely covered in mud," he said. "They looked a bit like statues."

It was not possible to identify the bodies, and it was unlikely that rescue workers would be able to reach the site for several days. Tons of muck still clog the mine.

The bodies were the first sighted since the eight miners were trapped by mud and slime that poured down the mine following a cave-in May 20.

Letourneau said three other men are believed trapped in the same ventilation shaft, but their bodies have not been found and are probably submerged in mud and water.

Three other miners, believed trapped in other areas of the mine, were given up for dead by mine officials some time ago. Their bodies have yet to be found.

Letourneau said the miniature camera detected water-marks on the walls of the ventilation shaft that were well above the two miners' heads, indicating they probably drowned immediately after the cave-in.

Their bodies were uncovered only after rescue workers siphoned out mud and water from the top of the shaft, using pumps lowered through a narrow hole from the 105-metre level of the mine.

The police spokesman said rescue workers will continue their efforts to reach the bodies by pumping out mud along a ramp leading to the shaft, a task which could take at least two days.

He added the camera will no longer be used.

Rescue workers had recently abandoned using the sophisticated piece of equipment when it failed to detect any bodies in the shaft.

But Letourneau said that when it was returned to its manufacturer in Montreal, technicians discovered that it was malfunctioning

Atlantic rower fails again

HALIFAX (CP) — Steve Kurachi's second attempt to become the first man to row across the Atlantic Ocean ended in failure Thursday when he was plucked from the his four-metre boat about 180 nautical miles east of St. John's, Nfld.

The Search and Rescue Centre in Halifax received a distress signal from Kurachi Wednesday and a Canadian Forces Argus radar surveillance airplane from Summerside, P.E.I., spotted him later in the day.

Kurachi's plywood and fiberglass boat was still afloat and Ziegler said he didn't know why the rower, who left from St. John's, sent the distress signal.

The Argus, aided by another Canadian Forces aircraft from Shearwater, N.S., remained on the scene until Thursday afternoon when Kurachi was picked up by a supply ship from a nearby oil rig.

He was taken to the oil rig in apparent good health and later left for St. John's aboard a helicopter.

Meanwhile, another lone oarsman attempting to row across the Atlantic, Kenneth Kerr, was back in contact with shore again after capsizing and losing touch 12 days ago, a friend said Thursday.

The friend, David Scrymgeour, said he received a radio message from Kerr, 28, giving his position as 500 kilometres off St. John's, Nfld., where he set out May 20 on his 3,800-kilometre row to Ireland.

Kerr said his boat capsized in a storm and he was flung into the water. But his lifeline kept him alongside, and he managed to get back in his 3.9-metre boat, Scrymgeour said.

Negotiators draw blank on satellite damages

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiators who spent last week in the Soviet Union trying to iron out a reparation settlement for damages caused by the Soviet satellite that disintegrated over the Northwest Territories in 1978 came home this week empty-handed.

Robert Burchill, who headed the six-member delegation, said today that although no agreement was reached during five days of intense talks, he left Moscow with the feeling that the Soviet negotiators want a settlement as badly as the Canadians.

"You always go with the hope of bringing home a settlement but you also always realize your hopes might not be fulfilled," Burchill, director of the economic law and treaty division in the external affairs department, said in an interview.

He would not single out specific stumbling blocks, saying only that there are "differences of approach and some differences of legal interpretation."

The Moscow talks were the second round of bilateral negotiations since the nuclear-powered Cosmos satellite plunged out of orbit over Canadian territory in January, 1978. The first round took place here last Feburary.

Money is the key issue in the negotiations, said Burchill.

Convent bars transsexual

TORONTO (CP) — A man who underwent a sex-change operation and applied to become an Anglican nun has been turned down by a Toronto convent.

The transsexual's request was denied by St. John's Convent, Bishop Hugh Stiff, dean of Toronto's Anglican diocese, said Thursday.

Stiff said Mother Frances Joyce felt "she had enough problems without taking that on."

Communications gap filled

The hassle over who should man Saanich's communications centre has been resolved.

The announcement was made in a joint statement released Thursday by the Saanich Police Association, the Saanich Police Board and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, local 374.

It said: "In co-operation with the Labor Relations Board a mutual agreement has been reached between the parties involved in a disagreement concerning union jurisdiction over communicators and the responsibility for provision of relief manning of the communications centre.

"The accord has been ratified by all parties and becomes effective on Saturday.

"An interim agreement with similar conditions has been and will remain in effect throughout Friday.

"An application by the Saanich Police Association that appealed a recent LRB decision to maintain CUPE' jurisdiction over communicator personnel working under police supervision will be discontinued."

Communicators will be transferred from the jurisdiction of the CUPE bargaining unit to that of the SPA upon the appointment of these communicators and will become special municipal constables pursuant to the Police Act.

The appointments will be made by 7 a.m. Saturday.

CUPE local 374 and the police association will sign a memorandum agreeing to CUPE jurisdiction over all civilian employees covered by the LRB's decision of Jan. 29, 1980 with the exception of the communicators who will be under SPA jurisdiction.

The SPA will provide relief manning of the communications centre as it was prior to June 11.

The police board also agrees to take no disciplinary action of any kind with reference to any matter arising from the complaint made to the LRB.

UVic may help troubled lodge

Although it's only in the discussion stage, the University of Victoria is prepared to do its share in saving Strathcona Park Lodge as a part of the province's educational system.

Joseph Cunliffe, chairman of the UVic board of governors, commented today on Education Minister Brian Smith's revelation in the Legislature Thursday that the university has been asked to buy the financially-troubled lodge.

"The lodge is a part of the education system," Cunliffe said, "and if there's a way we can assist or if we can provide a management service, we're prepared to do so.

"We've discussed the matter but we haven't taken any action to date."

The lodge provides outdoor experiences for students from around the province.

Its future was threatened when the education ministry cut its grant to the facility by almost two-thirds.

The ministry claimed the lodge was taking too large a portion of the funds allotted to outside groups providing services to students.

In answer to questions in the legislature, Smith said the lodge has had serious financial difficulties.

Goodwill box blast butane bomb?

A Goodwill box in the Cordova Bay shopping centre was blown apart in an early morning explosion that rocked the neighborhood.

Saanich police said the plywood box was demolished and old clothing and household goods that had been stuffed inside it were strewn over the lot.

Officers believe the bomb was made out of a green plastic garbage bag filled with butane or propane, sealed, and with a piece of blue paper towelling as fuse.

"I wouldn't have wanted to be the one who lighted it," a spokesman said. "It was a pretty stupid thing to do."

Rezoning bids meet rejection

The Advisory Planning Commission has recommended to city council that two rezoning applications for development projects, one opposite the Law Courts building and another at Haultain and Shelbourne be rejected.

They were the only two of a dozen rezoning applications which aroused much opposition when they were presented to the APC's public meeting on Tuesday.

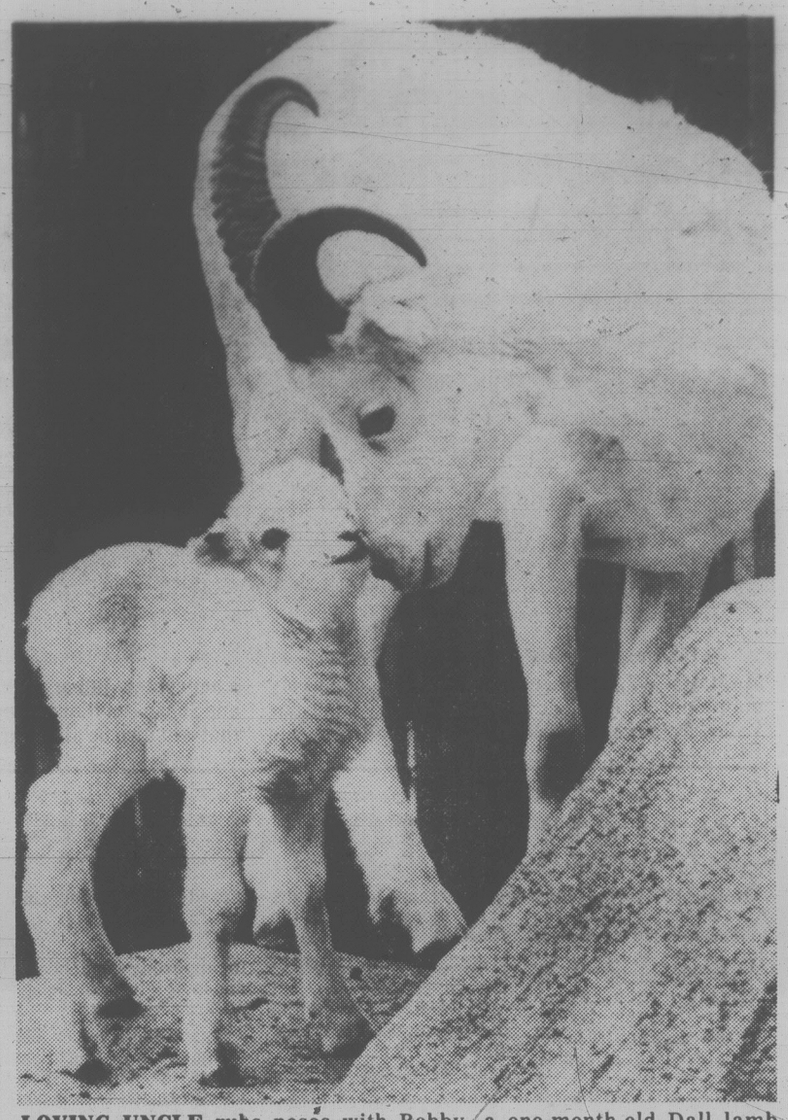

Neighbors of the affected properties spoke against the two projects.

Wencore Management Ltd. of Vancouver wanted permission for a zoning change from apartment to a mixture of commercial-apartment zoning to allow a six-storey building with professional offices on the main floor at 821 Burdett Street.

The other project was put forward by Ted Lunt Designs Ltd., and called for a small commercial project with four apartments on the second floor at 1648-50 Haultain.

Residents of Haultain Street said traffic and parking conditions were already severe in the area and the new development would make things worse.

The commission recommended rezoning of 2621 Douglas Street, offices of Victoria Press, publishers of the Times and Colonist, from limited light industrial to limited service zoning to permit commercial use of 13,500 square feet of vacant space.

Dear Abby:

I am very upset and hope you can shed some light on a problem concerning our son who is now 19.

About five years ago I found several pairs of girl's panties hidden under Mike's mattress. I was shocked and told my husband about it. He spoke to Mike, who explained that he and a neighbor boy had "found them in a trash can behind an apartment building. His father told him to get rid of them, and nothing more was said about it.

All through high school Mike was active in sports, music, clubs, etc. He was very popular with boys and girls. He is now in his sophomore year at college and has been going steady with the same girl for two years. (I'm sure they're doing more than just holding hands.)

Mike is now home for summer vacation. While cleaning his closet, I found a bra, panties and garter belt stuffed into his tennis shoes! I asked him what they were doing there. He got red in the face, said they weren't his and accused me of snooping. Believe me, I was not.

Abby, I am sick. He seems so normal. Please help me. I don't know how to handle this.

Worried

Dear Worried:

Apparently your son had had a fascination for female undergarments since adolescence. Don't be upset. Many males share this kind of behavior and function normally as men.

If your son feels that he has a problem, he should get professional help.

Dear Abby:

When I became pregnant four years ago — at age 43 — I was surprised and certainly not prepared for another child. (I had three grown children.) My sister-in-law gave us an old beat-up baby bed she had had in her basement for years. My husband sanded it down and painted it, and it looked like new. We used it until our baby outgrew it, then we sold it along with some other used furniture.

When my sister-in-law heard that we had sold the bed, she demanded that we give her part of the money we got for it. Abby, that baby bed was junk when she gave it to us, and nothing was said about returning it.

Do we owe her anything?

Steamed

Dear Steamed:

If she gave it to you, all you owe her is a "thank-you."

Confidential to Loving Sister:

If you truly want to help your brother get well, let him know that you love him, are confident that he will recover and admire him for finally going into therapy. Offer no suggestions. To tell a person who is undergoing psychoanalysis that all he needs to get well is "common sense," and that permitting his doctor to probe into his early unhappy childhood is causing his depression, is doing him more harm than good.

Autism's puzzle has many pieces

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Autism isn't a condition that affects a signifigant number of Victorians but its victims face one of the strangest kinds of impenetrable isolations known.

Modern medical knowledge doesn't include a deep understanding of the disease, either its causes, cures or symptoms, but some facts are known.

Autistic people can be of varying degrees of intelligence from very bright to mentally retarded but they share a common inability to comprehend and communicate with the rest of the world.

Autism has some unique characteristics that while not fully understood are common to most of those afflicted.

For example autistics are fasinated with order, symmetry and mechanical rhythm. They can become deeply absorbed in objects that display those characteristics.

They are sometimes able to function well doing asembly line type jobs.

Those autistics with a high degree of intelligence sometimes have phenomenal memories and recall abilities.

"They can see and hear well, but problems seem to arise in organizing and interpreting the information they receive from their eyes, ears and other senses. It's as though the input is received on only one channel at a time.

"Information from the outside world is not made into a clear, understandable picture but remains a confusing, frightening muddle.

Children who cannot understand the world around them are cut-off and isolated." is how the Pacific Association for Autistic Citizens describes the condition.

This isolation makes them appear uncaring about affection, apparently seeming to neither need or give it.

The condition can be diagnosed even in infants. Often the mother will notice the child doesn't respond to affection and cuddling or displays an unnatural dislike of changes in its physical environment.

This week the Victoria Society for Autistic Children marks its 10th anniversary.

Only about 10 children in Victoria attend the school, (statistics indicate about five of every 10,000 children are autistics) which was formed by the society and now is mainly supported by the ministry of education and the local school board.

But the society has a waiting list of a few more children when teachers become available.

That's a tremendous improvement over the situation existing before the society was formed when autistic children were either educated in regular classrooms or were grouped with other types of mentally handicapped children.

It was organized at the suggestion of child psychiatrist Dr. Philip Ney who thought if parents of these children combined their efforts they might succeed in coming up with better education methods.

One-to-one teaching is very important to these children, but also expensive. Victoria's class has five teachers for its 10 students.

Ann van Noordt, a member of the society, has a teenage daughter Terri who is believed to be autistic.

Van Noordt is convinced that early diagnosis of the problem is crucial to the eventual education of autistic children.

"As with normal children, autistic children pick up so much of what they know before they are six years old.

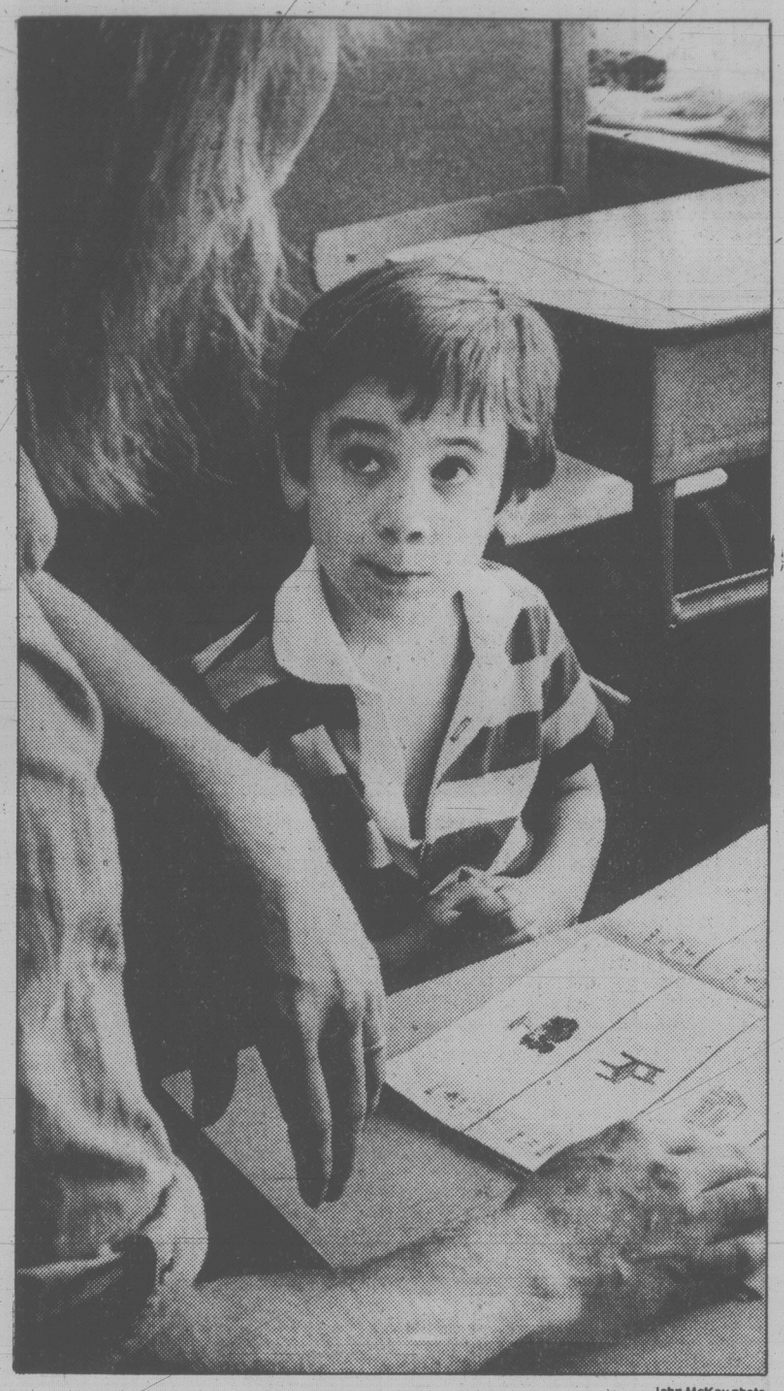

Children are so receptive to learning things at that age that it's possible and important to teach them a great deal then," she explained.

Eventually the society would like to establish a post basic training program to provide further education for those who complete the age-equivalent of secondary school.

Atlhough statistics indicate autism affects about for times as many males as females, in Victoria the figures seem reversed and more girls are in school now than boys.

Consequently the local society would like to establish a post basic training that includes such things as instruction in doing common household chores.

During the week marking the society's anniversary members hope to raise funds to assist the school and to inform the public about the condition. A display will be set up in the Hillside Mall.

Summer school of arts gala opening on July 14

Once again artistic director-founder J.J. Johannesen has brought together at the Summer School of the Arts that now bears his name (formerly the Shawnigan school) a group of artists of international quality.

Out of their presence as faculty, comes the Victoria International Festival, a rapidly growing and major entity on the summer scene.

The gala opening concert will take place July 14. It will take the form of a 'concerti extravaganza' with the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra conducted by William Shookhoff. The soloists will be double bassist Gary Karr; violinists Yuri Mazurkevitch and Dana Pomerantz-Mazurkevitch, and pianist Robin McCabe.

Other concerts in the world-class series will feature the Trio Rouvier-Kanterow-Mueller from France as well as members of the trio as soloists; British pianist John Ogdon and American pianists Joseph Bloch, Bela Siki, Harmon Lewis and Mitchell Andrews; oboist Bert Lucarelli, bassoonist George Zukerman, clarinetist Gervase de Peyer, violinist Daniel Heifetz, flutists Robert Aitken and Kathryn Cernauskas.

The University of Victoria based Pacific Wind Quintet is appearing and guest conductors include George Corwin and Gervase de Peyer.

Concluding the Festival will be two productions by the professional Canada Opera Piccola, with two short operas — Menotti's The Medium and Donizetti's Rita.

Travolta as Cowboy misses comeback trail

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Picture a country version of Saturday Night Fever. the hangout is a honky tonk bar in Houston Texas instead of a New York City disco, and the dudes all wear jeans, cowboy boots and stetsons instead of skin tight polyester slacks and gold chains. You've got the idea behind Urban Cowboy.

The star of the movie, John Travolta, is its biggest problem. A live-wire dynamo in his first starring role in Fever, Travolta has deteriorated through a couple of bad films and a lot of personal tragedy into a barely adequate performer. He mumbles, slouches and has about as much appeal as yesterday's meatloaf.

Cowboy was supposed to be Travolta's big comeback after the bomb Moment by Moment, but his heart isn't in it. The man is depressed, he doesn't look well. His skin is pasty and his liquid blue eyes seem about to brim with tears, even when he's supposed to be having a good time. He should take an extended leave of absence from making movies.

As for the plot, it will not interest anyone over 18 who doesn't have a macho complex.

Director James Bridges (The Paper Chase) has painted a picture of a bunch of hard-drinking red-necks who work in oil and chemical plants all day and take out their frustrations by beating their wives and getting into brawls.

At night they trade hard hats for cowboy hats and hit Gilley's, billed as the biggest nightclub in the world.

Gilley's is a big, dim cavern full of slot machines, country bands, a huge dance floor and loose women. It looks dirty, smokey and good place to find trouble. Travolta plays a country boy who goes to live with his uncle in the city and immediately gets drawn into the nightlife.

The story swings repetitiously back and forth between the monotonous drudgery of work and the false high of nights at Gilley's riding the bucking bronco machine installed to provide some entertainment.

About the only diversion from this tiresome theme is the juvenile relationship between Travolta and his teenage bride, who spend most of the movie trying to make each other jealous.

Good performances are turned in by fresh-faced Debra Winger, as the tomboy wife and Scott Glenn as a mean and lithe excon who adds a little interesting menace to an otherwise lifeless story. A solid cast of homespun supporting actors struggle to overcome Travolta's malaise, but the burden is just to heavy to carry.

Lymph system is a fascinating study

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Many readers write to me about glands that they develop in some parts of the body. I am troubled by their unnecessary fears about glands. Perhaps some expanded knowledge of glands will alleviate these fears.

There are perhaps a thousand glands, or lymph nodes, in the entire body. These vary in size from tiny, barely perceptible ones to those that are as large as grapes and small plums. Glands are normally found in the neck, in the abdomen, in the chest, in the armpits, in the groin and around the intestines. In fact, there is virtually no part of the body that is without glands. They are all part of a lymph drainage system that circulates in the body. It can almost be compared to the circulatory system of arteries and veins.

The lymph glands act as filters and collect bacteria, waste products and even foreign particles that may have entered into the lymph stream.

Lymph glands and the lymphatic system are part of the body's most remarkable protective system. The glands, stationed in important parts of the body, constantly guard its welfare in health and disease.

Infections of the nose, teeth, tonsils, adenoids and sinuses may cause tender enlargement of the glands at the side of the neck. Scalp infections and hair parasites may cause glands to become enlarged in the back of the neck.

Infections in the intestinal tract can produce enlargement of the glands that normally surround the intestines.

Infections of the skin of the foot or leg may produce an enlarged and painful gland in the groin. This well-situated gland is a protective stopgap to limit the spread of infection. Similarly, enlarged glands are found in the armpit when there is an infection of the hand or arm.

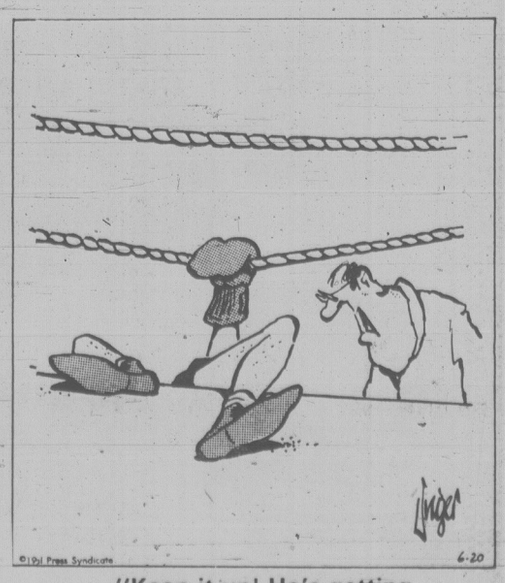

Glands themselves can sometimes become infected, swollen and painful. An abscess may form within the gland. When this occurs, it may become necesaary to evacuate the accumulated pus by a small incision.

It is interesting to note that the presence of pus in a localized abscess shows that the body's fighting mechanism is active against infection.

Glands become enlarged, too, in allergic reactions, mononucleosis, tuberculosis, leukemia, Hodgkin's disease and in some forms of cancer. Frequently, a gland — or part of a gland — is removed for biopsy study. In this way, a definite diagnosis can be made of any existing problem.

It has been said that the glandular system plays an important role in antibody formation. New scientific work seems to indicate that the lymphatic glandular system may also be involved in immune reactions in the body.

Summer fun to involve 600 children

The Victoria YM-YWCA is gearing up for one of the busiest summers of its 121-year history with more than 600 children taking part each week in summer camps, swimming lessons, childminding and recreational activities.

A record-breaking early registration in Y summer camps plus the addition of several new programs for youths between 6 and 18 years, has Y staff busy completing numerous program arrangements and training events to meet the needs of the children.

Camp Thunderbird, the residence camp for eight to 14-year-olds and the flagship of Y summer programs, is almost completely filled - three weeks ahead of schedule. Jim Leggat, the Y's Outdoor Education Director in charge of Thunderbird, says early registration has helped greatly in the planning of programs, meals, accommodation and staffing.

"Several camp staff have been busy for weeks now, preparing the camp for summer activities which will include for the second year, a forestry counselling program as part of the agenda for Camp Thunderbird, Wilderness Experience, Counsellors-In-Training and Camp Hummingbird," said Leggat. "Two Forestry counsellors have been hired this year — one more than 1979 because of the program's popularity and the Y's decision to focus on forestry education and awareness as a part of the camp experience."

Leggat said a new program — Thunderbird Wilderness Experience for 14 to 16-year-olds — will emphasize skill development in camping, canoeing, rock climbing and backpacking with a special emphasis on enjoyment of the outdoor recreation. The program will accept a maximum of eight registrants per session.

Another new program, directed at the 12 to 14-year-old age group, will take advantage of the abundant salt and fresh water opportunities that exist in the Greater Victoria area. Aqua Trek will introduce youngsters to skin diving, sailing, wind surfing and canoeing as well as acquaint them with various marine industries and services on Vancouver Island. The program is cheduled on a one-week session basis for the month of July.

"Summer Adventure, the program for children with hearing impairment, will again operate in conjunction with the Deaf and Hard of Hearing Institute of Vancouver Island. Betty Ife the director of the program has worked extensively with Y youth and the deaf and hard of hearing.

Two very popular chilren's day programs, Summer Excitement and Camp Hummingbird will again accommodate a total of 124 children each two-week session, helping to relieve many Greater Victoria working parents — the need to find suitable childminding services.

A recently announced Tourist Childminding service will operate 3 days a week from the Y, accommodating an expected 100 visiting children per week.

An additional 150 children are expected to be enrolled in regular swim instruction programs and another 100 a week will use the facility on a recreational basis. A total of 50 summer staff will supervise children's programs at the Y this summer.

"In all programs, a supervisor to children ratio of one to eightis strictly enforced," says Leggat. "Camp staff have been selected because of their maturity and ability to work well with children making for a safe, enjoyable 1980 summer at the Y."

For registration and further information phone the Y at 386-7511.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I am a 15-year-old boy and I don't think I'm going to be able to take it any more. My dad is an alcoholic, and he and mom don't get along. The only reason mom stays with dad is because we depend on him for our income and dad could never look after himself; he is too drunk most of the time.

The tension in our house is so bad that none of my friends ever come over because my parents' fighting just makes them uncomfortable.

Whenever I do talk to mom about her and dad, she says she will go to a lawyer, but I know she won't because he owns everything. I don't hate dad, but I sure don't love him either. What can I do to help dad and myself? Don't suggest Alcoholics Anonymous or something like that; dad is too proud to admit he has a drinking problem.

Answer: What an unfortunate story. I relly feel for you, living in a state of perpetual stress and misery.

He is a sick man, and the pride which prevents him from getting help at AA, or even admitting that he has a problem, are part and parcel of the sickness. I've seen too many individuals like this who, in the process of degrading themselves, destroy everyone around them.

Don't let that happen to you — or your mother, or father for that matter. You are young, but quite mature for your age. You may have to make some initial moves on your own. Your mother obviously hasn't got the strength.

There are many agencies or groups which can help you: Children's Aid Society, Family Service Agency, Adolescent Clinic, psychiatry departments or social service departments of general hospitals.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am a 16-year-old Roman Catholic girl. I have been masturbating, thinking that it was all right because it was part of growing up. But recently I found out that masturbation is against my religion. I don't know what to do. I don't know if I have committed a sin and I can't go to my priest or confession because I would feed embarrassed. I want to be a good Christian, but how can I if I don't know if I sinned or not?

Answer: If you believe you have sinned, you should confess your sin. Any sin is embarrassing, but the annonymity of the confessional as practised in your church should protect you from that. If you sinned without knowing it, the sin is very minor.

Dear Dr. Powell:

Can a girl become pregnant if she has sex two or three days after her menstrual periods?

Answer: The timing of intercourse to prevent pregnancy is referred to as the rhythm method. A number of things have to be considered for this method to be safe.

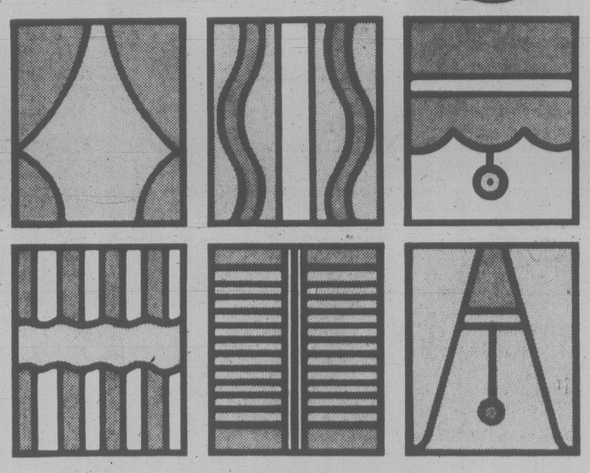

First, you must know your cycle pattern — the regularity of your periods and the length of the cycles. You can find this out by keeping track of your menstrual periods for a number of months.

A menstrual period comes about 14 days after ovulation (that's when the egg is released from the ovary; it then will survive less than a day). But although the egg may live less than 24 hours, sperm may live up to a week after intercourse.

Therefore, it is possible to have intercourse at what you thought was a safe time in your period; but to become pregnant when the egg is released several days later.

Peripatetic Grappelli stopping by for a show

For nine months of each year Stephane tours the world and the other three months he spends at one of his homes in Paris, Cannes, Amstedam or Tunisia. He is continually travelling at a pace that would exhaust a person half his age.

"As a matter of fact," says Stephane, "I don't like living in any one place. I don't like doing the same thing every day. Meeting new people and seeing new places all the time keeps me young, it keeps me interested, and it keeps me healthy.

"I used to smoke a lot but I gave it up in 1970, and now my brain is clearer.

"Practice is good for the fingers but not good for the imagination. Therefore I play very little before a performance. Of course I choose repertoire and make decisions about who should take certain solos and naturally we warm up before a concert. Because improvisation forms the basis of what I do I prefer not to expend all my energy and imagination in practice, or in the rehearsal room. So I usually arrive one hour before I'm supposed to perform, have a little run through with the other guys, take a little drink, some quick conversation, and then I'm on stage.

"It is my hope that on every occasion I play, the music is as fresh for the audience as it is for me.

GRAPPELLI
. . . on the road

"Maurice Chevalier once told me 'You must start very well, finish very well and in the middle it's nobody's business.' But me, I try to do the business in the middle too."

After enjoying two sold-out performances last year, C-FAX 1070 has booked a return engagement featuring Grappelli with the Don Etherington Trio.

This season's engagment will feature one concert only in the Royal Theatre at 8 p.m. next Wednesday, June 25.

Tickets are available now at the Memorial Arena Box Office, Mayfair Mall, Hillside Mall and Hately Park Brandywine.

Music in park Sunday

Leading Vancouver Island musicians and bands — such as Paul Horn, Dolphin in the Sea, Valdy, Sample Stearns Band and Orpheous — will this summer contribute to an impressive array of talent performing in free concerts in Greater Victoria Parks.

These recording artists will headline festivals in the park, but the real stars will be local musicians, who play and compose; Homegrown Musicians.

Building on a successful season last year, and its first concert in the park this year (over 3,000 people came out to the rainy Victoria Day Concert), the fledgling and industrious Homegrown Music Society of B.C. has ambitious plans for at least 10 concerts this summer.

In addition, there will be other free concerts, most of them organized by the Victoria Jazz Society with its Jazz in the Park series.

Homegrown Music Society, a non-profit organization incorporated under the B.C. Society's Act, will break in the summer all afternoon starting at 2 p.m. this Sunday in Beacon Hill Park's Cameron Bandshell.

This twelfth such festival in the society's history is sponsored by Westcoast Savings, CFAX 1070.

Featured will be recording artists Uncle Wiggley's Hot Shoe's Blues Band, and The Sea. This six-hour concert also features Veronica Jones' Nightfaces and the Folklore Centre Open Stage Series, with Childgrove.

"Free Music in the Park is a North American Tradition. Homegrown is attempting to revitalize that tradition, and updating with music to suit all tastes," says organizer Eugene Evans.

"The Festivals and Concerts this summer will range in musical tastes all the way from the classics, with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, through jazz, blues, folk and rock," he said.

Robin Hood set for summer

The Four Seasons Children's Theatre will present Robin Hood in many of Victoria's parks, playgrounds, squares and malls this summer.

Robin Hood's troop will encourage audiences to join them in singing songs, dancing around a maypole and a special archery contest.

The program is free.

Robin Hood will open at the Folkfest in Centennial Square on Friday, June 27 at 4 p.m. The second show will be a special performance at the Canada Day Picnic on July 1 at the Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park at 3 p.m.

Noon performances will be given July 2-4 at the bandshell.

The remainder of the summer shows are scheduled for Market Square, Ship Point, Mayfair Mall, Centennial Square and Eaton's mall.

On Mondays the company will perform in parks and playgrounds for Victoria area recreational departments.

Robin Hood is directed by Sandy Webster, a Victoria director and school teacher, well-known for her Children's Theatre productions which include the highly successful Pied Piper.

This adaption of the Robin Hood legend was written by Peter Mannering, artistic director of Four Seasons, who is currently directing The Wonder Of It All.

Veterans Steve Moysey, Mitch MacKay, Sean Sutherland and Mike Petersen are joined by new members Linda Fehner and Robert Mitchell of the University of Victoria's theatre department, Joan Koch and Gail Penny from the university's music education department, Stephen Harrison from Camsoun College's actor training program, Gordon Thomson from the Victoria Conservatory of Music and David McDonald from Spectrum Senior High School's drama club.

The Robin Hood company is financed by the federal government's summer youth employment program and donations from local merchants, businesses and private individuals.

For further information phone Four Seasons Musical Theatre at 385-3424.

Axe lops off lives

By JOHN GOUDAS

Talk about a thorough spring housecleaning — the powers-that-be have taken an axe, not a broom, to Days of Our Lives.

Old, familiar faces are lopped off, supplanted by eight newcomers. Just sorting out the characters, trying to keep stories straight isn't a breeze for diehard fans. As Susan Seaforth Hayes (Julie on Days) noted recently, "If viewers had been away for six weeks and then tuned in, they wouldn't recognize the show."

About the new squad — well, let's start off with one of the prettiest, a luscious blonde who's been singing most of her life, rather than playing dramatic roles. Gloria Loring was last seen at one of the Oscar presentations warbling nominated tunes, and if you happen to be in Tahoe or Vegas on weekends, Gloria vocalizes a part of Bill Cosby's act.

What's a singer doing on Days playing a sexy troublemaker, and not even getting a bar to hum? The soaper demonstrates an affinity for singers, that's all. Look at Bill Hayes, who plays good old reliable Doug unhappily married to Lee. And singer Kaye Stevens performed in high style over a long stretch as Trish's mom Jeri. So a Days tradition of employing musical types is unfolding.

LORING
. . . sexy troublemaker

Here's Gloria's description of Liz: "A dilettante in life, married three times, she's basically quite lonely. At 32, Liz needs to repair a skimpy relationship with her father."

Taking to a new trade to reach a different audience, Loring finds the transition isn't that difficult, not after 300 guest appearances on the variety and talk show circuit. Gloria won't be rattled on camera. Three Loring albums are on the shelf going back to 1968, and the lady is about to record another.

She's writing songs for herself and others with Eric Kaz under the United Artists label ("I think out the lyrics, Eric does both the music and words"), and shares credits with husband Alan Thicke, the Tandem producer, for the themes of Different Strokes and Facts of Life.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, June 21, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New approach necessary in connection with public relations, partnership and marital status — and legal agreements. Leo, Aquarius persons play significant roles. You meet someone whose views do not coincide with your own.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Moderate claims bring best results. Maintain conservative stance — avoid schemes, sensationalism. Family member will cooperate in "planned economy." Rise above red tape, office politics.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Open lines of communication; stress versatility, diversify, be ready for accelerated social activity. Sagittarius and another Gemini figure prominently. You are due to succeed on "third try."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Past obligations surge to forefront; highlight willingness to settle basic issues. Accent on security, home, authority figure and territorial rights.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Obtain valuable hint by studying Gemini message. Be ready for change, travel, variety — analyze bits of information and come up with complete story. Trips, calls, messages make this an exciting, productive scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Following slight delay, you get green light for "major production." Draw line between illusion and reality. Be aware, alert and steer clear of self-deception. Obtain story behind story.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have opportunity to strike chord of universal appeal. Be sympathetic to problems presented by those who have confidence in your judgment. If you complete project, you gain plaudits, respect and additional funds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New career opportunity comes into focus. Lunar position accents prestige, standing in community, special civil project. Leo, Aquarius natives figure in your personal scenario. Avoid lifting heavy objects.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on direction, security, aspirations and ability to communicate beliefs and views. Another Aquarian figures prominently. You learn by teaching — means share knowledge and exchange ideas. Follow through on hunch.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One who makes "money promises" could actually be financially embarrassed. Know it and rely upon your own resources. Highlight humor, versatility and willingness to ask pertinent questions. Be optimistic, not gullible.

IF JUNE 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY your sense of timing enables you to be at right place at crucial moment. You have rare ability to rebound following setbacks or apparent defeat. Humor is one of your major assets — you are able to laugh at your own foibles. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. August could be your most significant month of 1980, a year in wich you gain wider recognition and recognize difference between unnecessary burden and valid responsibility. A relative, previously critical, could make a 180-degree turn.

volunteering

Each week at this time of year the Victoria Volunteer Bureau receives a number of requests for volunteers to work in summer programs.

Last week's column featured the first of these requests. Today's column — the last before a month-long summer break — will focus on more volunteer opportunities for those with some time to spare this summer.

A muscial theatre company needs volunteers to sell tickets for their next production. Volunteers would sell the tickets at the Provincial Museum and would have the choice of the following shifts available seven days a week: 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., 4 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., and 6:30 to 9 p.m. Tickets sales will run until July 1st.

A hospital for handicapped children would welcome students to act as assistants to the hospital's recreation therapists during July and August. The volunteers would help take the children, who are aged 4 to 16 years, on outings, push wheelchairs, help feed them on picnics, and have fun with them in the various activities planned.

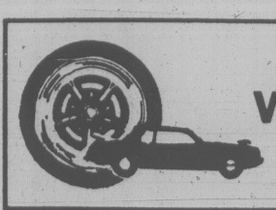

An extended care hospital would also be happy to hear from students, 17 years and up, who would be interested in visiting elderly patients, going for walks, socializing, serving tea and coffee, and helping with a variety of activities. The hours of this position would be arranged with the volunteer.

The same hospital is also looking for students, 16 years and up, to help occupational therapists in the rehabilitation section. The volunteers would work with young patients, playing table games and helping with other activities. Volunteers are also needed to transport patients between wards.

A Western community project with the aim of integrating mentally handicapped children and teens into community recreation programs needs volunteers for July and August. Volunteers would work one-to-one, or in small groups when necessary, helping the child or teen to take part in activities and would also serve as a leader to the other participants in the program. Training will be provided for volunteers and the time commitment required varies according to the specific program. Volunteers should be willing to learn new skills and should have a genuine interest in working with handicapped children or teens.

For students, these volunteer jobs will provide a valuable working and learning experience.

For more information on these and other volunteer positions, contact the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269. The office is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Dear Mike:

The little plastic gear at the bottom of the distributor on my 1965 Valiant Slant Six broke. I replaced the gear but now can't get the engine to start. Coil, plugs, distributor points, and cap are new. I first set the distributor to the timing mark, then rotated it 180 degrees, then moved it about 25 times to various positions. Nothing. The plugs fire, and there's a big spark from the coil to the distributor when I crank over the engine. Please help.

Frustrated

Dear Frustrated:

Several possibilities. Are you sure the wires are installed in firing order in the distributor cap? Is the point gap right? Could the problem have anything to do with the carburetor rather than the ignition system?

Dear Mike:

I have a chance to buy a 1977 Olds Toronado from a neighbor. This is a special car with a wraparound rear window and sunroof. I've never seen another like it. The owner says it's very rare. Is this true, and do you feel this car will ever become a collector's item.

Anxious

Dear Anxious:

According to Oldsmobile, only 134 of these XSR sunroof models were built in 1977, so it is rare. Whether it'll become a collector's item is hard to say, but I'd be inclined to think so — certainly in time.

Dear Mike:

Where can I get a vibrator for the radio in my 1951 Ford? The local shops can't locate one.

No Notes

Dear No:

Try Jim Gensch, 1810 Juliet St., St. Paul, Minn. 55105. Jim specializes in restoring old car radios.

Feel free to send your automotive questions to Wheels care of Michael Lamm, 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 9527.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE IS $950.00

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges' decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

12. Puzzle clues may be abbreviated and such words as AN, THE and A omitted.

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!
THIS CROSSWORD is not a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a work list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS

4 SLICK not slack. The slack type of worker is characterized rather by the way he fails really to "set about" the job. "SLICK" is fully apt.
7 HATEFUL not fateful. HATEFUL matches up more convincingly with the clue's air of distaste.
9 TAINTED not taunted. TAINTED is the stronger answer, since one may merely be amused when taunted.
10 WINDS not wilds. "Polar regions" consist almost exclusively of wilds, so it's not so much a case of these being wilds to be encountered "in" such regions. Also, wilds are daunting terrain anyway, without needing to be qualified or instanced in the manner of the clue.
14 RAGE not race or rave. "Race" hardly applies, since it is impossible (rather than merely "does no good") for a badly injured athlete to race. "RAGE" (talk angrily) is better in line with the sense of the clue than "rave" (talk wildly or incoherently).
17 TOP not tip. Proud success is essentially a matter of getting to the TOP. Tip applies only insofar as it can mean the TOP or summit.
18 LEAN not leap. The case of leap tends to be imponderable. Without knowing the width of the fissure, "somewhat foolish" might be a great understatement for leap.
20 BETTER not bitter. The clue's comparison with the previous bout favors "BETTER," a term of comparison. As a spectacle, a fight merely needs to be more or less good (why bitter?).
22 SHADE not spade. Aptly, a lamp SHADE is the sort of thing apt to suffer minor damage or degrees of breakage — that it may, or may not, be "too badly" broken. On the other hand, one imagines a spade being quite all right until the handle breaks, rendering it simply useless.

CLUES DOWN

1 MANIAC not manias. The clue's use of "unfortunately" strikes a note of pity, as if referring to a person.
6 CHEFS not chess. The clue's word "practitioners" relates better to persons who practice an art or craft (CHEFS), than to chess, which has "players," rather.
11 LAWN not laws. The clue's phrase "conscientiously kept" suits that which might, less ideally, be ill kept (LAWN). Laws should simply be kept (the word "conscientiously" being inappropriate).
12 TEN not men. It takes a fair number of persons to be able to make "quite a hubbub," but men may be only two or three.
13 ATTITUDE not aptitude. Aptly, one can describe a helpful ATTITUDE as a "good attitude." However, since aptitude is always good, the clue's proviso "If good" is not wanted.
15 PLANE not plans. PLANE links up particularly well with the theme of speed. Also strictly speaking, it's not so much a question of preparing preparations (plans) as of preparing man or machine (PLANE).
16 CATTLE not battle. Since battle directly involves or consists of slaughter, the indirect nature of the clue suits CATTLE better.
19 CHAT not coat. Since he can always get a coat if he feels like it, there is no call for him to "appreciate" his coat. Aptly, there may not always be somebody to CHAT with.

Time for refugees to get established

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today ordered a six-month special parole for 114,000 Cuban and 15,000 Haitian refugees who have illegally entered the United States in the last two months.

Victor Palmieri, the State Department's co-ordinator for refugee affairs, said the parole residence period will allow the refugees to establish residence in the United States and give Congress time to study special legislation outlining what federal and state services and benefits the immigrants will receive.

The special parole status will put the Cubans and Haitians on the same footing.

Palmieri told a news conference the idea of the program is to find jobs for all concerned and establish a system for conversion of their status.

Just plain screamers are nothin' to holler about

SPIVEY'S CORNER, N.C. (AP) — Unless a new generation of hollerers is found, the U.S. National Hollerin' Contest may be silenced for good.

It seems there's a lack of genuine hollerers for Saturday's competition in this crossroads community of 49 people. Contest officials say the hollerers are gradually being replaced by screamers, yellers or screechers — the folks who give out with tonsil-tearing war whoops or the city slickers who stand up and shriek "Taxi!"

Which is a far cry from a holler.

"Hollerin' is a dying art and the authentic old-timey hollerers are dying off," laments contest originator Ermon Godwin. "We know the old-school hollerers are out there, but the thing is getting them to come out and be heard. I feel like there'll be some of 'em out there Saturday, but most of the people who enter will just stand up there and scream."

Past winners, most of whom are in their 70s and 80s, are not allowed to enter again, so new hollerers must be found each year.

In 1977, the winners were a dairy farmer and his three-legged dog who hollered out their rendition of Precious Memories.

Godwin, who claims that he's never hollered a note in his life but that he can spot an authentic holler a mile away, has seen more than his share of "screamers and yellers" since the contest started in a backyard in 1969.

For the untrained ear, it's all just so much noise. But Godwin says there are four basic hollers that were practised daily back before telephones came into being: the functional, the expressive, the communicative and the distress.

—The functional holler, sometimes mistaken for a hog call, is not only used to call the farm animals in, but also to let your neighbor know all is well, supper's on the table or you need a fresh bucket of water in the field. It's a favorite of women contestants.

—The expressive holler falls in the category of loud social conversation and is generally practised just for the sheer ecstasy of hearing yourself. It comes in handy when singing, particularly if you don't know all the words.

—The communicative holler is used simply to touch base with another soul. A man working alone in a field might holler just to hear a reassuring answer from his neighbor in the next field.

—The distress holler, often heard at weddings and wakes, obviously means something is wrong and is easily distinguished from the others since it is usually done in a tormented falsetto.

"As long as the world wants hollerin'," said Godwin, "we're going to give it to them." At least as long as the hollerers last.

Grenada forces kill assassin-bid suspect

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — A former army sergeant linked to a failed assassination attempt on Grenada Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was killed in a shootout with security forces today, less than 24 hours after a bomb killed two children and a woman and wounded 20 other people at a rally Bishop attended.

The death of the former soldier, John Phillips, was reported by the state radio. He was killed in his house in the suburb of St. Paul's where he had holed up and traded bullets for hours with government soldiers sent to arrest him.

The radio said there were no other casualties in the battle, but that a man it identified as Keith St. Bernard was being sought "dead or alive" by authorities. The radio said St. Bernard, who was not further identified, was linked to "imperialist forces."

The bomb went off about 3 p.m. Thursday shortly before Bishop was to address about 1,000 people attending a political rally in a soccer and cricket field north of St. George's, the capital of this lush Caribbean island.

The bomb was placed under the pavilion where Bishop sat along with other government officials and Cuba's ambassador. The explosion buckled the pavilion floor, but its force spread sideways, killing two children and a 23-year-old woman standing nearby and wounding 20 others.

None of the government officials or guests was injured because of the way the bomb went off, and security forces immediately whisked Bishop away to his home about three kilometres away overlooking the city.

Speaking on a nationwide radio broadcast Thursday night, Bishop urged one out of five of Grenada's 100,000 citizens to enlist in the militia and prepare for "people's war" against his opponents. He blamed the bombing on "imperialism and its local agents."

Afghan players defect

ISLAMABAD (AP) — Seven members of Afghanistan's national basketball team scheduled to play in next month's Moscow Olympics defected to Pakistan to protest the Soviet "reign of terror" in their homeland, the captain of the team said today.

It was the second defection in the last few weeks by members of an Afghan sports team protesting the presence of 80,000 Soviet soldiers to combat a guerrilla war by Moslem rebels opposed to the country's Marxist regime.

The Soviet soldiers backed the ouster and execution of President Hafizullah Amin last December and replaced him with the curremt Afghan leader, Babrak Karmal.

Captain Karim Dad Khan told reporters in Peshawar, 160 kilometres west of here, that he and the other defectors crossed from Afghanistan into Pakistan's Paktia province, continued on to the town of Parachinar and then moved to Peshewar.

He did not say specifically when the crossover occurred.

"Like other Afghan people, we reject the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, and disapprove the Babrak Karmal regime's decision to attend the Moscow Olympics," he said.

"The people of Afghanistan hate the Soviets and are heroically resisting the Soviet troops, despite a reign of terror let loose by them in Afghanistan."

Several weeks ago, members of the Afghan national soccer team selected to attend the Summer Games defected in West Germany to protest the Soviet intervention.

Span-ram pilot loses licence

TAMPA (AP) — Florida officials, citing a possible risk to lives and property, have lifted the licence of John Lerro, who was guiding the freighter Summit Venture when it rammed into the Sunshine Skyway Bridge.

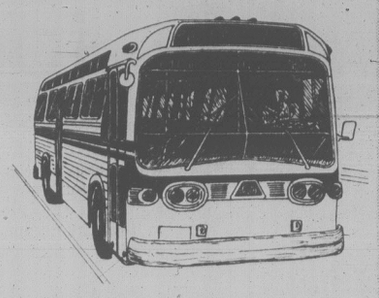

Lerro said he would go to court if necessary to fight the emergency order issued by the state department of professional regulation.

The 37-year-old deputy pilot was guiding the Summit Venture through the Tampa Bay shipping channel May 9 when the 185-metre-long phosphate freighter knocked out a section of the southbound span.

A Greyhound bus and seven other vehicles plunged into the waters and 35 people, including six Canadians, were killed.

What's New, What's Happening . . .

On June 21st, 1980, Deep Cove Marina will officially re-open after a year-long rebuilding project. The Marina was rebuilt at a cost of close to $300,000 and includes the installation of new concrete floats, a new building to house the Marina stores, charter business, boat sales offices and a large boaters' coffee lounge. The parking area has been doubled and the grounds re-landscaped using lots of rockery and evergreen plants.

Originally built about 20 years ago, the Marina has seen hard times for the last 5 to 10 years. When it was purchased in June of 1979, it was somewhat of a blight in the centre of an otherwise beautiful cove at the northeast end of Saanich Inlet. The location is an ideal one for boaters cruising to and from the Gulf Islands, and since its transformation is proving to be a popular docking place for boaters coming to one of Victoria's finer eating places . . . the Deep Cove Chalet Restaurant.

New Look For Deep Cove
The Marina is located on a beautiful bay at the Northeast end of scenic Saanich Inlet. In keeping with the beautiful setting of the cove, landscape architect Gerhard Rehm has designed the grounds to blend in with the verdant surroundings. Rehm has used rock, evergreen bushes and flowers to create a seascape appearance for the entire Marina.

New Breakwater
The Marina has recently installed a floating concrete breakwater to afford it the needed protection from the Northwest. It was designed and manufactured by Aqua Terra Floatations and provides positive floatation qualities as well as excellent moorage protection for boats of all sizes up to 50'. The access from the floats is provided by a new aluminum gangway, also manufactured by Aqua Terra.

New Fuel Dock
The new fuel dock is now open at Deep Cove Marina and to properly announce the event, fuel will be sold at wholesale prices throughout the weekend. Harbour Fuels will be standing by to ensure that there is an adequate supply during the weekend. Following this opening special, the price will be discounted for boaters purchasing an amount above a minimum of 30 gallons.

Marina Store
Bait, ice, tackle and groceries, boaters' necessities, are now available at the newly renovated Marina store. Mike and Allison Lafortune will also have selected nautical gifts for sale in the store from Suntime Yacht Shop. The store is open each day from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. to accommodate the needs of visiting boaters.

Charterboats
You don't have to be a boat owner to enjoy cruising, exploring or fishing the sheltered waters of the scenic Gulf Islands or the inside passages of the Pacific West Coast in the 1980s.

Captain John Marsh and his wife Patricia formed the company of Marsh Marine Charterboats Ltd. earlier this year to develop year-round boating on the B.C. coast. The idea is paying off as customers from across Canada, the U.S.A., and as far away as Malaysia, are chartering 25' to 42' length yachts (bareboat or skippered), power and sail, for vacations, learn-and-cruise, or fishing expeditions from a fleet of 16 boats.

If you don't know how to operate a boat, you can learn sailing, boat handling and navigation at the Marsh Marine Sea School or, for the more experienced, a "brush-up" of skills with a qualified instructor aboard the vessel.

Sightseeing from the daily Cruise Charterboats is also available to experience the excitement and adventure of sailing the routes followed by Captain Vancouver and the explorers. First-class power boats are used for these cruises, with experienced captains navigating.

Before purchasing or trading a boat, Marsh Marine offer a consulting and marine surveying service to assist the purchaser in making this important decision.

Free Boat Rides
Marsh Marine Charterboats will have its fleet of charterboats on display for the weekend. These charterboats are available for bareboat or skippered sightseeing or fishing holidays. Two of them will be used on the weekend for giving free short cruises from the Marina each hour. If you have guests coming this summer, come out to Deep Cove Marina and inspect the charterboats, then make arrangements for a cruise with your guests in the beautiful Gulf Islands.

New Electronics On Display
A representative of Navitron Communication Ltd. will be present on Saturday demonstrating the latest in equipment from Datamarine, Raytheon and Apelco.

A new speed sounder from Andres Instruments featuring a no-through hull installation will also be displayed. This new speed indicator is ideal for sailboats and will measure relative speed accurately to 12 knots.

Victoria Trawlers
Deep Cove Marina is the dealer in British Columbia for the beautiful Victorian Trawlers manufactured in Taiwan. The pleasure yachts feature warm teak interiors, hand-laid fibreglass hulls and very low fuel consumption diesel engines. A 36-foot double cabin model will be on display. This boat is equipped with twin diesel engines, V.H.F. radio, stereo, digital depth sounder, Espar Diesel furnace, constavolt, anchor winch and canvas bridge cover. The price on this demonstrator has been reduced to $128,000 to make way for a new 41-foot sedan model that will be delivered shortly.

Fishing Derby on the Weekend
The Sidney Anglers' Association will be holding a fishing derby at Deep Cove for local anglers. Good size salmon have been moving into Saanich Inlet lately and the chances for a large catch are good. A prize of $100 will be awarded to the winner for the largest salmon caught over the weekend. The runner-up will receive a Peetz rod and reel from Jeune Bros. Peetz Tackle and Skis Ltd., Silver Harvest Distributors, will award prizes for hidden weights and the largest non-salmon caught.

Entry forms are available at the Marina store and boaters are reminded that the launching ramp is now closed permanently.

San Juan Cruising and Racing Yachts
Deep Cove Marina is the exclusive dealer for the SAN JUAN cruising-racing yachts on Vancouver Island. Proven, modified and improved continuously over many years by the Clark Boat Company, the San Juans have amassed an enviable record of racing triumphs. Their fleet now ranges from 21' to 34'. Each yacht fills a specific need of the sailing public.

No ooze, good news but lava would blast

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A lava dome growing in Mount St. Helens' gaping crater appears likely to remain in place rather than oozing down the volcano's flanks, but the dome would be the first part of the mountain to explode in a new eruption, a geologist said Thursday.

Pete Rowley of the U.S. Geological Survey told a news conference in Vancouver that the dome now is higher than the wall of ash across the north side of the crater.

Observers in a helicopter Wednesday said the 200-metre-diameter dome grew almost seven metres during the day to a height of about 60 metres.

Almost no earthquake activity was detected at the volcano overnight and early Thursday, a University of Washington geophysics spokesman said.

In a related matter, Ed Chow, director of the state emergency services department, turned down a request from Cowlitz County officials to reduce the size of the restricted area around the volcano.

He said the "red zone" boundary would remain 30 kilometres from the volcano.

Earlier, volcano expert Donal Mullineaux of the geological survey said the question was not one of determining a safe distance from the volcano but of determining where there is an acceptable risk.

Paul Rea, a hydrologist for the U.S. Forest Service, said it will be decades before Spirit Lake, just north of the mountain, returns to a productive state after being inundated by logs and mud.

Face masks anyone?

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Know anybody who would like to buy 73,700 face masks?

The masks were a hot commodity in Eastern Washington after ash fallout from the May 18 eruption of Mount St. Helens paralyzed much of the region.

Today, you can't give a mask away.

City officials want suppliers to take back the unused masks, but "they are resisting," city purchasing agent Kenneth M. Haskins said Tuesday.

The city ordered and received 717,000 masks and distributed to the public all but 73,700.

Man hijacks bus to flee ash blues

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — One of the many people feeling oppressed by the ash that pervades Portland chose an unconventional, and illegal, means of getting away from it all.

Authorities said an unshaven man in his 30s used a gun Thursday to commandeer a city bus for a trip into the countryside and then fled on foot shortly before a state policeman checked the vehicle.

Trooper Mike Hakala said the man ordered the bus stopped, then escaped up the timbered slopes of the Columbia River Gorge 50 kilometres east of Portland.

Hakala said he was on patrol when his curiosity was aroused by a Tri-Met bus far from its usual Portland area route.

Hakala said the bus driver, Diana Carrier, told him the man flagged the bus down between stops during its regular run through North Portland. He was the only passenger.

Carrier said the man pulled a silver-plated, .357-calibre Magnum revolver from his jacket and ordered her to drive east out of the city.

Hakala said she quoted the man as saying: "I want to get out of town — out of all this ash."

Ash from a June 12 eruption of the Mount St. Helens volcano in southwestern Washington has created dust clouds in Portland.

BIRTHDAY LICKING for Queen Mum comes in form of commemorative 12-pence (about 34 cents Canadian) stamp the U.S. post office plans to issue on her 80th birthday, August 4 — the first time a British royal birthday has been so observed. It was designed by Jeffrey Matthews, and is based on a photograph by Norman Parkinson, who has recently photographed all members of the royal family.

Victim of cancer gave her life for unborn son

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Anita Brown knew she would lose her battle with cancer, but she won the fight that really mattered to her: five hours before she died, she gave birth to a son.

Mrs. Brown, 25, a Jehovah's Witness, died of hemorrhaging caused by a tumor in her jaw. She had refused chemotherapy for fear of endangering her unborn child.

"Essentially, Anita was giving her life for that of a child she had not yet had," cancer surgeon Ronald Lapin said Thursday.

"She was positive, laughing and joking until the very last," said her husband, Tom Brown.

She gave birth Tuesday by caesarian section to four-pound Gregory Paul Brown. The birth, three weeks premature, came at University of California-Irvine Medical Centre. The infant has no trace of cancer and is given a good chance of survival, doctors said.

Mrs. Brown's story is all the more tragic, Lapin said, because her tumor might have been removed in its early stages if she had found a surgeon who would operate — as Lapin eventually did — without using the blood transfusions barred by her religion.

The cancer came to light more than 2½ years ago, when Mrs. Brown went to a dentist complaining of pain in her jaw. When x-rays failed to pinpoint the cause, a thin slice of tissue was examined under a microscope and the disease was discovered.

Surgeons in her native Nevada refused to operate without transfusions, so she began a fruitless quest for a cure, including trips to Mexico for Laetrile treatments.

A year and a half ago, she married Brown, a truck driver in Nevada, who knew of her condition.

Firm urges total solar

NEW YORK (AP) — A major West German electronic equipment manufacturer has proposed a $50-trillion program to convert the world's economy to one powered by solar energy by the middle of the 21st century.

AEG Telefunken, a Berlin-based company with annual sales of $10 billion, said Thursday that vast banks of silicon cells — organized into plantations — could generate electricity which then would be conducted through tanks of sea water to create hydrogen gas.

The hydrogen, transported by tanker or pipeline in the same manner as natural gas, would power autos and factories worldwide and eventually could be "comparable to the present cost of gasoline," Telefunken said.

The solar plantations would be located in tropical or subtropical regions.

By the year 2040, 10 solar families, each containing 100,000 identical plantations, could be producing "enough hydrogen to replace 15 billion tons (100 billion 35-gallon barrels) of oil," Telefunken said.

The total area of the plantations would cover an area almost as big as oil-rich Saudi Arabia. "The total investment costs (would) amount to $50 trillion," the company said.

Silicon cells, made by Telefunken and several other companies, already generate electricity for space satellites.

Implant heat treats cancer

BALTIMORE (AP) — In a medical first, University of Maryland Hospital doctors implanted a miniature microwave antenna in a human brain in hopes the procedure might lead to a breakthrough in treating a form of cancer that claims thousands of lives each year.

The antenna, connected to a microwave heat therapy system, was placed in the brain of 28-year-old man on June 12. The man suffers from glioblastoma multiforme, a form of brain tumor that kills 8,000 to 10,000 people annually.

During treatment, the microwave system emits intense heat directly into a cancerous tumor. The goal is to kill off residual tumor cells that usually cannot be reached surgically and go on to infiltrate adjacent tissue.

Dr. Michael Salcman, chief of the neuro-oncology department, said the man received an hour-long treatment on June 12, has had no ill effects and "is still neurologically highly functional."

The man, not identified at his own request, had exhausted all other standard forms of treatment.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Bolivian bombings kill two

LA PAZ (AP) — Bombs killed two people and injured three Thursday as right-wing extremists appeared to be stepping up efforts to derail Bolivia's June 29 general elections by forcing a military coup.

Ball player's killer freed, insanity plea under fire

LOGANSPORT, Ind. (UPI) — Leonard Smith walked out of a state mental hospital a free man today, seven months after he convinced jurors he was insane when he killed baseball star Lyman Bostock.

Psychiatrists and social workers who treated him said he showed no sign of insanity during the six months he was hospitalized.

A judge who had no choice in the matter under the law which prevailed at the time Smith was found innocent by reason of insanity ordered him released.

Smith's mother and two other relatives were waiting inside the gate of the forensic unit where the criminally insane are housed when he walked out at 8:35 a.m.

He walked five paces from the building to their car, got into the rear seat, and was driven away.

Ann Hanson, the social worker who directs the unit where Smith was held, said during all the time he was hospitalized he had shown no evidence of psychosis.

The case prompted a revamping of Indiana's homicide statutes by lawmakers convinced Smith got away with murder.

"We're opposed to it and very disturbed," said Lake County Prosecutor Jack Crawford, who fought the freeing of Smith on grounds he is still a danger to his former wife. "He's committed one act of violence and is likely to commit another."

"Through insanity loophole he's going to wiggle out and be a free man . . . We've been disgusted by the jury verdict all along," he added. "A verdict like this is a legal tragedy for family of Bostock and Smith's wife, who will have to live in fear that he'll come back to finish what he started."

Smith, 33, fired a shotgun into a car driving through Gary Sept. 23, 1978, killing the 27-year-old California Angels' outfielder. The blast wounded Smith's estranged wife, Barbara, whom Bostock had just met.

Smith was tried twice for the shooting. The first trial ended in a hung jury. The second ended Nov. 16, 1979, in a verdict of "not responsible by reason of insanity."

His lawyer argued Mrs. Smith's cheating drove the killer insane. A defense psychologist backed up the theory, contradicting court-appointed psychiatrists.

On Dec. 7 Smith was temporarily committed for mental treatment for 90 days. The commitment later was extended another 90 days.

Keeping pests off your plants

I have never been one to maintain that gardening is all a bed of roses. It doesn't matter whether you have an ordinary sized city lot or an acreage estate or confine your green thumb activities to a few potted houseplants in an apartment, there are numerous tasks which must be performed — some of them boring, some of them back-breaking and some of them downright distasteful.

In this latter category of distasteful tasks, I would include coping with all manner and breeds of undesirable insects and such horrid little beasts as slugs and cutworms, notwithstanding one anonymous reader who, in response to a recent column on earwigs, suggested that we are no doubt just as loathsome to them as they are to us.

Slugs really get to me. I'm darned if I'll use a favorite method for getting rid of them which is espoused by my all-organic gardening friends; that is, to place a saucer of beer on the ground which is supposed to attract them and ultimately result in their demise by drowning. Why should such nasties leave this world so happily? I'll settle for slug bait anyday.

Cutworms are something else again, I've yet to find a chemical that provides a satisfactory method of eradicating these scourges of the garden without offending my own standards of environmental protection. Squishing remains the major method of extermination around our garden.

A major problem, however, is that my husband says he'd sooner risk his macho image rather than squish the things between his fingers so that task falls entirely upon my shoulders, or rather fingers, for my loathing of cutworms is even greater than his and I virtually revel in the deed.

These thoughts coursed through my mind the other day as I read a letter from a reader with a tale of woe about infested houseplants as eloquent as I've seen. Allow me to quote from it so those with a similar problem will realize they're not alone.

"In the last couple of years, my mother has not received a gift plant which was not all bugs," my correspondent begins. "Sometimes one kind of bugs, other times (maybe from different nurseries or at different times of the year) a different kind of bug again. She has quite a few houseplants of her own and by the time we finally get of rid of bugs on everything, there comes another gift potted plant or cut flowers and there we have to start all over again.

"Last fall, I transplanted all the houseplants, using well-baked soil in everything and we were enjoying a no-bug house until, as a get-well gesture, someone sent her bouquet of mixed flowers again.

"This was some time in November and — well, I don't know where to start — but there was a very small black fly and another light-colored one just a little bit bigger. We couldn't find anything on the houseplants but they were flying all over the house, so we know they came from somewhere!"

She and her mother became truly concerned because they have accumulated an impressive collection of housplants which they did not want to become pest-infected.

"It's always the same thing," the lady laments. "People just wire their orders and first thing we know, we have more bugs again."

Well, I've never experienced this problem to such a massive extent but whenever I do spot some winged ones around my houseplants, I take some fairly simple measures.

The black flies breed from the maggots or eggs that come in potting soil that is high in organic matter. These are not a great problem but can be controlled by watering-in a contact insecticide.

The whiteflies should be sprayed in the morning before they get active with a contact insecticide, hitting the undersides of the leaves. Some people dip their plants, held upside down, in the pesticide. Always follow label instructions.

Iranian bank may help bail Chrysler Corp.

Times News Services

DETROIT (AP) — An Iranian bank is among those that have agreed to take part in the financial rescue plan for Chrysler Corp., a banking industry newspaper reported Thursday.

Bank Tejarat, an Iranian institution owed $3.6 million by Chrysler, authorized its New York representative, Maureen Raichle, to sign the debt reorganization documents, American Banker, a daily newspaper, reported.

The bank agreed to participate in the bailout even though the U.S. government has frozen an estimated $8 billion in Iranian deposits in U.S. banks. That action was taken because of the continued captivity of 53 Americans in Tehran.

A Chrysler spokesman confirmed the account, which Raichle had confirmed to the magazine. Neither would give details.

In Tehran, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr continued to attack his Moslem fundamentalist foes.

In other news, 35 counter-revolutionaries were killed Thursday night in a clash with police at Qotur, a railway junction close to the Turkish frontier, Tehran radio said today. Two policemen were killed.

Meanwhile, Iraq holds its first parliamentary election today since the overthrow of the monarchy 22 years ago. The voting comes amid a smouldering Kurdish rebellion and tensions with neighboring Iran.

In addition to voting in national elections, the 1.5 million-member Kurdish minority will choose a 20-member legislative council empowered to pass laws relating to social, cultural and economic development of the region and to administer local institutions in co-ordination with the authorities in Baghdad.

Hussein gets tanks

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — King Hussein has gained a promise of advanced U.S. tanks for his Jordanian forces despite failure to agree with President Carter on the right pathway to peace in the Middle East.

Officials said Thursday that the Carter administration has reversed an earlier decision and now is ready to sell Jordan 200 of the M-60A3 series tanks, equipped with night vision sights, in a $320-million deal.

The disclosure was made at about the same time as King Hussein delivered a Washington speech strongly urging the United States to support Palestinians in their hopes for self-determination and an independent homeland.

The United States firmly backs Israel's opposition to the creation of an independent Palestinian republic on the borders of the Jewish state. But the Carter administration is eager for Jordan to join Egypt and Israel in the U.S.-sponsored talks on a form of autonomy on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip.

Israelis abduct guerrilla suspect

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli soldiers crossed into southern Lebanon, took an 18-year-old suspected Palestinian guerrilla "for questioning" and blew up a house used as a guerrilla armory, an Israeli army spokesman said today.

The raiders entered the village of Kantara Wednesday night, but the spokesman said no announcement was made at the time "because we do not issue a communique on every peep."

The soldiers crossed into Lebanon near Misgav Am, the Israeli border settlement in the northern Galilee where Arab terrorists killed three Israelis in an abortive attempt to take hostages in April.

UN sources confirmed the abduction, but said they were told the youth would be returned to his family today.

Pryor 'very, very ill'

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Richard Pryor's doctor has postponed skin-graft surgery on the critically burned comedian and has issued his most pessimistic evaluation yet of Pryor's recovery chances.

"Richard Pryor is in critical condition and very, very ill," Dr. Richard Grossman said Thursday in announcing the surgery has been postponed. "I cannot overstress the seriousness of Mr. Pryor's injuries."

His evaluation was the most pessimistic since Pryor was admitted to the Sherman Oaks Community Hospital June 9 with third-degree burns over the upper half of his body. He suffered the burns when his clothing caught fire at his home, and was given one chance in three of living.

Carter, Cossiga defy Soviets

Times News Services

ROME — President Carter Friday opened talks with Italian leaders that he hopes will lead to common policies on inflation, energy and defence.

Carter and Italian Premier Francesco Cossiga agreed today on the need to go ahead on a modern European-based nuclear missile system but disagreed on the approach to the Middle East negotiations.

In a joint statement issued during Carter's two-day state visit to Rome, the leaders said the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan "poses a grave challenge to the West and to its interests in Southwest Asia and the Persian Gulf."

The statement said that as a result of this threat, both countries view "as indispensible a comprehensive Western political strategy" and a commitment to the "long-term defence program" of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

This program calls for the deployment of 572 long-range theatre nuclear weapons based in Western Europe to counter the growing Soviet arsenal of SS-20 missiles in Eastern Europe.

It also calls for an approach to the Soviets on mutual arms reduction measures, a proposal that has, in effect, been rejected.

The joint statement showed both men to be in general agreement, with the notable exception of their approach to the Middle East negotiations.

In the Middle East section of the statement, Carter reaffirmed his "belief" in the Camp David accords. But Cossiga, in a separate paragraph in which he referred to the rights of the "Palestinian people," sided with the other Europeans who are seeking an alternative approach to Middle East peace.

Carter arrived Thursday night amid some of the heaviest security ever seen in the Italian capital. Saturday Carter will go to Venice for the weekend summit of Western industrial democracies.

Roads from the airport to Rome and city streets were heavily patrolled by army troops, carabinieri armed with sub-machine-guns and watchful police.

Romans saw little of Carter and his entourage, including the first lady and Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie.

After he was greeted at the airport, Carter flew by Marine helicopter to the Quirinale Palace, Italy's equivalent of the White House. There Carter briskly reviewed the palace guard, then retired for the night after a palace-grounds jog.

Carter and Cossiga met today at the Quirinale Palace atop the highest of Rome's fabled seven hills. Earlier, Carter had met with Italian President Alessandro Pertini.

After the discussions, the president, Mrs. Carter and daughter Amy were scheduled to visit some of Rome's tourist sites. Carter was to lay a wreath on the tomb of Italy's unknown soldier at the Victor Emmanuel Monument this afternoon before visiting the Coliseum and the Forum of ancient Roman times.

On Air Force One en route to Italy, U.S. officials said they are confident that the president and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt are not at odds over the deployment of new intermediate-range missiles in NATO-guarded territory of Europe.

There had been concern in Washington that Schmidt, during his June 30 visit to Moscow, might propose a freeze on deployment in Europe of additional "theatre nuclear forces," or TNF, as the missiles are called. NATO agreed in December to the missiles' deployment to counter the Soviet nuclear superiority and emplace missiles capable of reaching targets in the U.S.S.R.

LONDON (AP) — The British government gave the go-ahead Thursday for a 965-kilometre pipeline under the North Sea to gather natural gas from offshore fields.

Oil Minister Hamish Gray called it "one of the major engineering projects undertaken in the second half of the 20th century."

The 91-centimetre pipeline will cost an estimated $3.2 billion U.S.

It will link the deep-water Magnus oilfield northeast of the Shetland Islands — along with a dozen smaller fields farther south — to a giant processing terminal at St. Fergus near Aberdeen, on Scotland's east coast.

The pipeline is scheduled to start pumping gas, methane and hydrocarbons ashore in 1984.

The projected value of the gas due to be gathered is estimated at a minimum of $93 billion.

Demand for North Sea gas has grown because of increasing oil prices and concern about future oil supplies.

The St. Fergus pipeline will put Britain, which is scheduled to become self-sufficient in oil by the end of this year, in a key bargaining position in Europe, where demand for gas has skyrocketed.

Gray told a press conference the pipeline system will save gas now being "wastefully" flared off on oil production platforms in North Sea.

Once the system is fully operational, he said it will create a massive spinoff petrochemical industry in economically depressed Scotland.

Gray and Energy Minister David Howell said the state-owned British Gas Corp. will only have a 30-per-cent stake in the pipeline project. The rest of the cost will be carried by a consortium of BP, Shell, Esso, Mobil and financial institutions.

Boycott grain: silent switch pulled?

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — The Carter administration, in a quiet reversal of policy, has told U.S.-based multinational grain shippers they can sell foreign-grown grain to the Soviet Union, according the the Minneapolis Tribune.

The newspaper said the administration's policy change was so quiet that confirmation of the switch came first from officials of Cargill Inc., a worldwide grain-handling company based in Minnetonka, Minn.

A spokesman for the U.S. agriculture department confirmed the news later, but only on the basis that he not be quoted by name, the paper said.

The Tribune quoted the spokesman as saying no administration announcement of the change in grain-trading policy is planned, and there was no official statement of why the administration changed its position.

Cargill had voluntarily stopped selling foreign-grown grain to the Soviet Union shortly after President Jimmy Carter announced an embargo of U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union in January.

Carter ordered the embargo Jan. 4 after the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan. He withheld 17 million metric tons of U.S. grain the Russians had on order, but allowed eight million tons, which had been promised in a five-year contract, to be delivered.

At that time, the administration asked U.S. multinational grain traders to give up doing business with the Soviet Union.

The Tribune said that the embargo on U.S.-grown grain remains in force. The 17 million tons of U.S. grain withheld from the Soviet Union remains mostly in government-sponsored grain programs. Farmers complain the stockpile continues to depress the prices they can get for grain.

"The policy of not letting the foreign affiliates of U.S. companies sell to the Russians has not denied grain to the Russians," Stuart Baird, a Cargill spokesman was quoted as saying.

Sir Hugh still king of Harrods

GLASGOW (AP) — Scottish millionaire Sir Hugh Fraser outmanoeuvred rival tycoon Roland (Tiny) Rowland in a boardroom showdown Thursday to retain control of Britain's biggest department store chain.

Fraser is chairman of the House of Fraser chain which includes Harrods of London, the department store where the Queen shops. He rallied the support of key stockholders to fend off a takeover by Rowland's Lonhro Ltd. conglomerate. Lonhro's other move — forcing Fraser to pay higher dividend — also failed.

Heroin addict act ruled valid

We'll wait in case further appeal: Mair

The B.C. Court of Appeal in a unanimous decision today ruled the government's controversial Heroin Treatment Act is valid legislation.

The decision by the court's five judges reverses an earlier Supreme Court ruling by Mr. Justice Allan McEachern who found that the legislation invaded the federal field of criminal law and created a new crime of narcotic dependcy.

The legislation was challenged by civil libertarians in the name of Brenda Ruth Schneider, a former heroin addict who complained of the compulsory nature of the treatment plan under which addicts could be held for three years.

Health Minister Rafe Mair said today the decision may not be not the final outcome.

He said he is concerned that the issue may yet be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada by the minister of justice.

"I'm not going to go ahead with a compulsory program until all areas of appeal are exhausted," Mair said.

The minister said it could be a year or possibly longer before the matter is finally settled.

"We don't want to go ahead (with compulsory treatment) with a sword of Damocles hanging over us," Mair added.

The man who brought in the heroin treatment plan, former health minister Bob McClelland, said he is gratified by the court decision.

McClelland, now minister of energy, said he has consistently defended the program as constitutional.

"We had the best advice from the federal government of the time and the ministers involved that what we were doing was constitutionally within our rights and I'm happy that the Appeal Court now has made that decision as well."

NDP health critic Dennis Cocke (New Westminster) said he hopes the issue will be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada.

"Whether or not it goes to the Supreme Court, I do hope the minister drops the program. It's a disaster," Cocke said.

Justice M.M. McFarlane, who wrote today's Appeal Court judgment, said he concluded that the provisions in the act for examination, apprehension and detention of dependent persons or patients are in no way intended to be punitive.

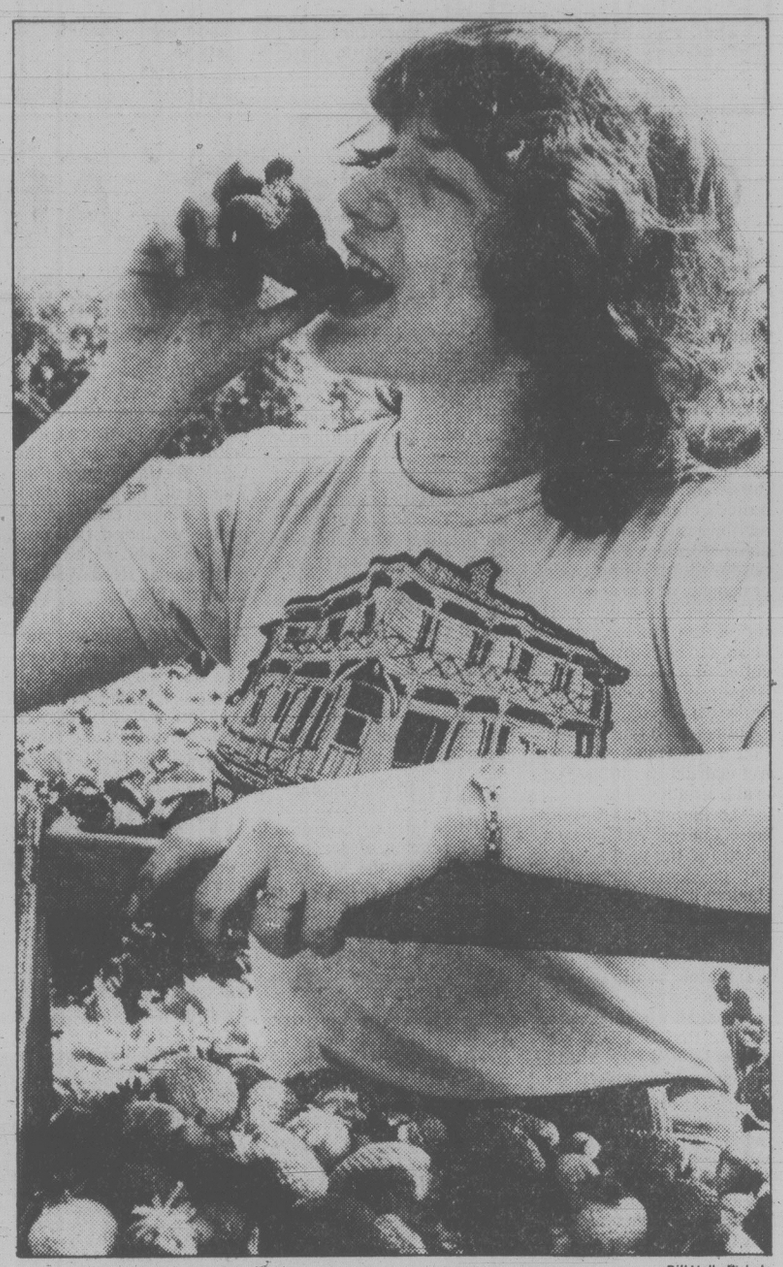

"They are provided for as ancillary to 'treatment' as defined," he said.

"The legislative plan is not to punish users of narcotics.

"It is to provide facilities and other means designed to assist in terminating or diminishing a patient's use of or dependency on the defined narcotic.

"Although there may be occasions when a person will be detained or treated

By WALTER STEWART
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Feeling tired, loggy, run-down? Perhaps it comes from holding up a a share of the one trillion dollars — that's $1,000,000,000,000 — in "created" money that is currently hanging over the world's head.

Or, then again, perhaps not.

After all, not too many people know about this inflationary, and enormous, debt-load hanging out there — a little thing like a trillion dollars is easy to overlook in a crowded world — and not everyone who knows is all that excited.

"It's not a subject we really want to get into at this time," one IMF official told FP News. "Too many uncertainties."

He acknowledged that a trillion dollars is about equal to the total dollar holdings of the United States. He also acknowledged that the creation of such a sum reacts on the world economy just as if the U.S. money supply were doubled overnight — which is to say, it gives inflation a hell of a boost. But he wasn't sure the trillion dollar figure was right — "Nobody knows for certain"— so the best thing, he thought, was not to get excited.

This view is widely held among the decent, sober element, which is the same element that kept saying "the economy is fundamentally sound" for the first two years of the Great Depression.

A contrary, and excited, view is taken by Tom Velk, associate professor of money and banking at McGill University, an acknowledged expert on world credit problems.

A bearded, cheerful, outgoing man, Velk sounds merry enough — unusual in economics, the "dismal science" — until he gets onto the subject of how corporations, banks and even governments have become caught up in the business of creating money out of nothing.

Then he sounds like one of the Old Testament prophets, and the can of ginger-beer he waves in his hand might easily be taken for a lightning bolt. Velk says the problems stems from the very nature of banking, because . . .but let him tell it himself:

"When you go to the bank to borrow a million dollars, they don't hand you the money over the counter. They write down your name and put a one and six zeroes beside it. It is the promise to pay that counts, not the bills.

"You can then go out and write cheques, knowing they will be honored. But the bank is severely restricted in the amount of money it can create in this way. It is bound by the amount of reserves it has on hand in its vault. No more reserves, no more money.

"That is how credit controls work — reserve requirements are raised, or the cost of borrowing to replenish reserves is raised.

"But these rules only apply to money denominated in your own currency. There is nothing to stop your bank from giving you a million dollars in yen, or lira, or whatever. There is no limit at all on foreign currencies."

Over the past 15 years, Velk says, banks all over the world, restive under restrictions at home, have fled to the Euro-dollar market, where no controls apply.

Suppose, for example, that you are a car-maker in France, anxious to buy Italian steel to make cars in West Germany. You can go to a Belgian bank and borrow $1 million to buy the steel, having it "denominated" in, say, U.S. funds by the simple device of writing beside the loan: "in U.S. funds."

Commons boycotted over boy

OTTAWA (CP) — Pat Carney, Progressive Conservative MP for Vancouver Centre and the mother of a 15-year-old son, said Thursday she is boycotting the Commons until something it done about the lack of travel allowances for single parents.

"If I were married, I could bring my spouse to Ottawa. I simply want to bring my dependent child, for whom I am totally responsible," Carney said in a press release Thursday.

Commons rules permit spouses of married MPs to travel to Ottawa six times a year. But the Commons committee on members' services refused this week after three months of study to take action on her request the allowance be transferred to her son.

"Since my job is in Ottawa and my child is in Vancouver, it is not clear how I can sit in the House until this matter is resolved," the MP said.

"Since I cannot leave my child on his own in Vancouver, I am returning to my riding to look after him until the committee can agree on a way to reunite us in Ottawa."

Carney said the regulations "make it difficult for the House of Commons to truly represent the Canadian population."

"The House of Commons in no way reflects the real world in terms of sex, age, ethnic origin, income levels or marital status."

Carney said she raised the issue with members of the Commons staff in March and was advised a month later to seek the support of the members' services committee.

"I think three months is a reasonable period of time to deal with a relatively simple issue," Carney said.

She said the cost for her son to travel to Ottawa, at $520 for economy return fare, is prohibitive.

Cheaper charter flight schedules are generally too inflexible to accommodate an MP.

Rail travel is not possible for brief school breaks and regulations for defence flights require that a child be over 16 years of age.

Rival-union clause snags building pact

Contract negotiations covering 45,000 B.C. construction workers have broken down over one key issue.

Both sides are awaiting the outcome of a province-wide strike vote.

Roy Gautier, president of the 17-union B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said management refused to budge on its rejection of the union demand for a common affiliation clause which would allow any of them to stop work if tradesmen not affiliated with the council were working on the same project.

Chuck McVeigh, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association (CLRA), replied the proposal was dangerous because it could lead to walkouts whenever there is an inter-union dispute.

McVeigh said he was confident a contract could be signed within hours if the demand were withdrawn. However, because it has not, the talks have become deadlocked.

The issue would have to be resolved with a yes or a no.

"I don't think there is any room for compromise on this one."

Meanwhile, a wage proposal is on the table that should bring a settlement, if the main issue could be settled, McVeigh said.

The results of the strike vote will not be known until about July 10 when tabulation is completed.

McVeigh, who bargains for about 800 contractors, said he found it frustrating to be within sight of an agreement only to have the talks break down over one issue.

He said the CLRA has tentatively agreed to a clause that would permit union trades workers to walk off if non-union help is hired. Some unions already had that right but now it will be made universal in the building trades with the signing of a new contract.

The remaining question does not involve non-union workers, it has to do with inter-union rivalries.

For example, if a contractor were building a mill for a forest products company and any forestry union workmen became involved, the construction workers could all walk off the job if the CLRA accepted the union's proposal.

They stick up the banks at night with bit of glue

VANCOUVER (CP) — A thief armed with a tube of glue has found a new way to stick up banks — and the result has been to gum up the night deposit system at B.C. branches of the Royal Bank.

A bank spokesman said Thursday envelope night depositories have been sealed at about 100 branches after thieves discovered a method of retrieving customers' deposits.

Several branches of the Toronto-Dominion Bank throughout the province have also been hit by the thief with the glue, but the bank so far has not announced any plans to seal its envelope night depositories.

There have been no cases reported in the Victoria area.

The thief's modus operandi apparently involves gumming up the mechanism that is supposed to drop a deposit out of reach from the outside door.

An envelope deposited when the mechanism has been interfered with in this way will disappear from view, but is still within reach.

Officials of both banks were reluctant to disclose details of the security problem but confirmed that glue was being used to interfere with the depositories.

"Negotiations are under way with the supplier of this equipment to determine the feasibility of design modifications which would correct the present weakness," said Royal Bank spokesman David Laundy.

Losses so far have not been large because they have generally involved small deposits of cash and cheques from individuals and not businesses, he said.

60 years together, they'll wed

The couple, who have nine children, 35 jrandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, got married last month. "This is long enough to live together without getting married," said Mrs. Trohan, 74.

"God makes you for one man and I have him. We're getting old together."

Trohan, 85, said another reason is that the federal veterans affairs department suggested they get married so Mrs. Trohan could apply for a widow's pension if he dies first.

Court fight pays big dividend

VANCOUVER (CP) — A small group of shareholders who rebuffed a takeover bid has been paid a handsome dividend in B.C. Supreme Court.

The 59, representing 2.23 per cent of the shareholding in Whitehorse Copper Mines Ltd., refused an offer of $4 a share from Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd.

They exercised their right under the Canada Business Corporations Act to have a court fix fair value of the shares coveted by the Toronto-based giant.

Chief Justice Allan McEachern, overruling the expert opinions of two Vancouver investment houses, has decided the shares in Whitehorse are worth $6.50 each.

The judgment means the holdout shareholders, whose 76,838 shares were worth $307,352 under Hudbay's $4 offer, have gained an additional $192,095 for a total of $499,447.

McEachern also ruled the dissident shareholders are entitled to costs in the 26-day trial.

In assessing value of the Whitehorse shares at $6.50, the judge overruled valuations of Wood Gundy Ltd. and Richardson Securities of Canada, both of whom said $4 was a fair and reasonable offer.

Noting that Wood Gundy made an $11-million error in calculating Whitehorse's cash flow projection, the judge said he could not place much weight upon the company's opinion.

The chief justice said Richardson Securities did not give enough consideration to potential development of Whitehorse's other properties.

Shareholders who had already accepted the $4 bid don't benefit from the judicial windfall.

Sam Belzberg's family corporation owned 937,980 shares in Whitehorse. At $4 a share, the Vancouver financier sold the family's interest in the Yukon company for a total of $3.7 million.

Had he joined dissident shareholders the Belzbergs could have sold their Whitehorse shares for a total of $6 million.

The events leading to the B.C. Supreme Court decision this week began in May, 1978, when Belzberg, having previously turned down offers of $3 and $3.50 for his Whitehorse shares, accepted the $4 offer.

McEachern noted that the six management directors of Whitehorse, who are also directors or officers of Hudbay, recommended acceptance of the $4 offer.

The three independent directors, including Belzberg, advised shareholders not to accept the offer.

Hudbay, which owned 40 per cent of Whitehorse, acquired Belzberg's 28-per-cent interest and by September, 1978, had picked up additional stock, representing 90.97 per cent of the shares held by others.

After further negotiations, in which 738 of 797 holdout shareholders elected to transfer their shares to Hudbay at $4, the remaining 59 agreed to be paid fair value as determined by the court.

BILL DICK
MANAGER

It all began in 1946, when a friendly bank manager, taking a chance on two ambitious young men, provided one thousand dollars and a lot of good wishes for the future.

Suddenly, Saunders and Hitchman were a LARGE gas station. In 1965, another big step, as the boys took on the Toyota Dealership in Victoria. Since that date it has been all progress and success, with Toyota sales rocketing, service demands booming!

The next step was a logical one. More space and larger premises. Their existing property was ideally located, and with the purchase of adjoining land, Saunders and Hitchman were in the position to add new modern buildings, and have created the attractive business establishement you see today.

With the sale of their car dealership in 1977, they have expanded their auto body repair business to the new Rock Bay Auto Centre which is fully equipped to service all makes of cars and trucks. Come in and meet the staff today.

She completed a map as a term project in a cartography course taught by UVic's Roger Wheate and thought no more about it.

Wheate took the map to a Canadian Cartographers' Association conference in Montreal, entered it in a competition and Carol's effort ended up being chosen as the best student effort in Canada.

Health Minister Rafe Mair couldn't speak to the B.C. Lung Association in Vancouver Thursday night because of illness.

The association was told the minister was suffering from the flu and had to cancel the engagement.

So who was the chubby chap with the beard bouncing around the squash court at Harbor Square Thursday night?

The next time, Rafe, they'll want a note from your mother.

Who says chivalry is dead?

Not Bess Forbes, long-time Times writer.

Bess was out driving the other day when phttt, her car developed a flat.

She bumped and lurched her car into the Metchosin golf club parking lot and inside, asked if she could use the phone to call the auto association.

A chap — he never ever would identify himself — asked if she had a spare and when told, yes indeed, she had, rounded up two other men and promptly proceeded to change the flat.

The trio insisted on anonymity and even came up with a cup of tea for Bess.

Nice going guys. May you knock three strokes each off your handicaps.

The provincial energy ministry has issued a snappy little booklet entitled Fuel Economy and You, designed to help B.C. drivers get the most out of a gallon of gasoline.

"Drive as smoothly and evenly as possible," says the publication. "Pretend there's an egg between your foot and the gas pedal, and a glass of water on the dash.

There's a chuckle up and down press row when Ottawa announces a federal cabinet minister will be coming out to Victoria for some public event.

At least nine times out of ten the cabinet minister begs off, apparently as part of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's policy of paying more attention to the west without actually going there.

Latest no-show was Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc who Wednesday sent his parliamentary secretary to the sod-turning ceremony for the new Marine Technology Centre at Pat Bay.

To be fair, Postmaster General Andre Ouellet showed up in Victoria on schedule this month, a fact that created gasps of astonishment from veteran Ottawa-watchers who had been trying to guess who his substitute would be.

B.C. comptroller-general Lionel Bonnell — the man who's causing a stir in the upper echelons of the B.C. civil service over who's responsible for what in the finance ministry — says he hasn't held the post since the days of W.A.C. Bennett as reported Thursday by the Times.

In fact, says Bonnell, he's only been with the B.C. government for 20 months.

The fuss revolves around Bonnell's refusal to hand over certain of his responsibilities to Deputy Finance Minister Larry Bell because to do so would violate the Financial Control Act.

Esquimalt Ald. Bob Jones is off to Arnprior, Ont. next week to attend a four-day conference aimed at helping municipal officials to develop plans and implement measures to meet emergency sitiuations.

Just so long as all the material has been updated.

One Town Talk contributor swears that he still has somewhere a booklet on nuclear attacks which suggests that if one is driving and sees a bright flash, one should duck one's head below the dashboard "but keep going".

It's usually management that gets the lumps but shipyard union brass came under attack by one of their own at a Victoria Labor Council meeting Wednesday night.

Dave Higgins, of the Boilermakers union, complained that only his union with 12 members working at Yarrows shipyard asked for an air test following the release of asbestos particles during the recent refit of the Queen of Prince Rupert, now the Victoria Princess.

"The professionals have failed us, the professional business agents," Higgins said.

He said it was only Neil Hindle of his union who pushed for the Workers' Compensation Board to conduct air particle counts.

The postal folk at the legislature have been staggered — literally — by the huge volume of mail on that old chesnut, Sunday shopping.

More than 6,000 letters opposing new shopping legislation have poured into MLAs since the proposed act was introduced April 10 by Attorney-General Allan Williams.

Opposition to the Holiday Shopping Act has come from Christian fundamentalists but many more protests have come from department store employees and other workers worried that the traditional rest day is threatened.

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Off the coast of Oak Bay sit a number of small islands populated now by sea gulls, sheep and radio towers.

The islands range in size from Discovery Island, which is the largest and has a lighthouse, an old homestead and a short stretch of road, to tiny islands like some of the Chain Islets or Alpha Island and others that are little more than perches for sea gulls.

The most obvious evidence of human use is the tall radio towers that sit on the otherwise uninhabited islands.

The Indian band has leased land to several Victoria radio stations to erect transmission towers which are often unwanted in any area near a city.

But the islands' only inhabitants — the wild sheep, sea gulls, cormorants, other small birds and animals and the occasional deer that manages to swim over — don't seem to mind.

Even though the islands are within a 30-minute boat ride of Victoria, they remain virtually unknown and unvisited.

Wildflowers bloom amid rocks

The CRD is interested in them because they are relatively untouched and certainly undeveloped.

Al Lubkowski, a planner working on the View Royal settlement plan, says while the CRD really has no jurisdiction or intent to do anything with the islands, it wants to take a look before irreversible changes occurr.

He admits it might be best to leave the islands completely alone.

But he's concerned some development proposal may sneak up and catch everyone by surprise.

If the region at some time in the future decides it wants the islands, there's the possibility the Songhees might consider some type of land trade.

(Oak Bay, because of an unusual authority granted it years ago, has jurisdiction over ocean and islands within a 1000 feet boundry of the muncipality's shoreline. Consequently islands such as Mary Tod and Staines islands, which are in the same general area as the islands belonging to the Songhees, are controlled by Oak Bay.)

Half of it is held as a provincial park reserve and another eight and a half acres is up for sale.

Years ago the island's lone resident, a Captain Beaumont, built a homestead on the then unclaimed land looking out across a windswept plain to the ocean.

When he died he left the property to the Boy Scouts which sold the property several years ago. Although the buildings are dilapidated, the property is beautiful and certainly private. The property, probably the only part of the islands that will ever be privately owned, is again up for sale with an asking price of $115,000.

The two Chatham Islands have small herds of sheep grazing.

While their efforts distinguish the islands from the others which are overgrown with dense underbrush, a botanist notes that eventually the sheep will cause the island to be treeless.

The sheep are such efficient feeders that they eat any young trees which germinate. When the old trees die, there will be nothing to replace them.

Birds nest in sheltered corners

In case anyone is considering the thought of a tender young Chatham Island lamb dinner — it isn't recommended.

Because of the flock's long-term inbreeding, the sheep may carry tuberculosis.

The islands are sheep heaven most of the time. There are no natural predators and the only force acting against them is dry weather.

Several of the islands are in the province's ecological reserve holdings.

Jemmy Jones, Alpha and the Chain islands have all been designated reserves for different reasons.

Rare species of wildflowers exist on the other two, which also provide excellent examples of subtidal marine life.

The province's ecological reserves were established mainly to protect natural colonies of animal or plant life and to provide areas for scientific studies.

While the public is allowed to visit the reserves, they are not to be thought of as public park land.

Shipyard lays off 40 as new orders dry up

Philbrook's Shipyards in Sidney has laid off 40 employees in the last several months and is retrenching because of a slowdown in the boatbuilding market, president Don Dobie said today.

"We're down from what we normally have," he said, in response to reports that business at Philbrook's was down sharply and it had discharged most of its employees.

Two laid-off employees told the Times that work at Philbrook's had dropped off to a low level after an extremely busy period. No orders for new vessels were on hand, they said.

High interest rates in the U.S. where Philbrook's sells most of its production of pleasure craft are the major factor in the decline, Dobie said.

"We have dealers as far east as Annapolis, Maryland and they say everybody's just holding pat."

The company has had as many as 70 employees working on boatbuilding contracts, but the last major order — four charter fishing boats for Bob Wright's Ucluelet operation — was finished recently and Philbrook's has no new orders for boats.

Its fibreglassing plant was shut down recently for two weeks but the company recently got an order from B.C. Hydro so it will be starting up and some employees will be rehired, Dobie said.

One laid-off employee said the plant was working three crews 24 hours a day at the beginning of the year, but now there is no work at all at the plant.

Dobie also confirmed that the company is pulling out its Bosun's Marina operation, where Philbrook's has built about 25 of the successful 39-foot Fast Passage sailboat design in the last three years.

"We don't have the volume there to support that facility," he said.

Besides boatbuilders and fibreglassers, the company has also laid off mechanics. Service and repair work at Philbrook's is down as well as boatbuilding.

One laid-off worker said seven mechanics quit en masse recently and went on unemployment insurance, where they could earn more money. At Philbrook's they were only getting two days work a week. Dobie said that three or four mechanics were laid off.

"They've got no contracts for new construction," said one former employee. He added that the bad herring fishery this year in B.C. also contributed to the downturn at Philbrook's as fishboat owners have deferred new vessel orders and servicing work.

Ferries kept apart

The B.C. Ferry Corporation has adjusted its summer schedules to ensure ferries don't pass each other in Active Pass.

There was some suggestion when the truck ferry Queen of Alberni went aground last summer that the Alberni had swung wide to avoid another ferry.

The subsequent inquiry revealed this was not the case but ferry officials have decided to avert any possibility of it happening in future.

Under the new schedule, instead of ferries leaving simultaneously from Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen on the hour, departure times at each end are 15 minutes apart.

When a ferry leaves Tsawwassen at 7 a.m., its sister ship won't leave Swartz Bay until 15 minutes later.

City delays decision on taxing for centre

CARSON

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria has delayed making any decision on the best way of soaking the city's business community to pay for the expected deficit on the convention centre.

Last week council was poised to endorse a finance committee recommendation to raise some $272,000 by ceasing the practice of allowing businesses to deduct trade licence fees from their business taxes.

But letters objecting to the move came from former mayor Mike Young, as a partner in the law firm of Straith and Co., the Victoria Bar Association, the Downtown Business Association and several other professionals.

On Thursday finance committee chairman Ald. Frank Carson defended the change with a wealth of statistics, but aldermen deferred a decision until those who objected to the original plan can study the matter further.

Carson said he thought the city was about a year early in imposing the tax change as any deficit incurred during the first start-up year of the convention centre could easily be paid out of general revenues.

"We don't know if we're going to have this," he said, referring to the convention centre project recently put on hold by Finance Minister Hugh Curtis.

The committee was also told that there is in fact no legal basis for the 26-year-old practice of allowing trade licence fees — which range from $100 a year for lawyers and most professions to $1,800 for a main branch of a bank — to be offset against business taxes.

The Municipal Act says this must be done, but Victoria has its own charter and city statute enacted by the legislature.

To specific complaints from lawyers, who protested the loudest about the proposal, Carson asked comptroller Mason Sheldrick to outline the history of the trade licence.

Sheldrick read from 30-year-old bylaws which showed that lawyers — and other professionals, including architects, accountants, engineers, barbers, real estate agents "and other transients" — have had trade licence fees frozen at $100 since 1950.

Was gory slaying planned?

Crown counsel and the defence for a 29 year-old Sidney man charged with first degree murder made summations to the jury in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday.

Mr. Justice Gordon MacKinnon will instruct the jury today before it retires to consider its verdict.

The final addresses ended the nine-day murder trial of Denis Barry McFadden, charged in the knife slaying of 31 year-old Marion Barbara MacKay in her Saanich home March 17.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood told the jury McFadden is not guilty of first degree murder because he did not intend to kill MacKay when he entered her home at her request to fix the plumbing and a broken window.

Premeditation, or planning, must be proven beyond resonable doubt before a jury can find a defendant guilty of first degree murder, he said.

Jurors must remain calm, cool and collected in deliberating — "not withstanding the goriness, the horror, the viciousness, the nastiness of the crime," Owen-Flood said.

McFadden is a dangerous, bad man, but his character is not the issue, he said.

Whether he is a kind and loving husband or whether he is "an absolutely ruthless scum" has nothing to do with the decision.

"If a man is to be convicted he is to be convicted for what he has done, not what he is."

An expert witness says McFadden has an anti-social personality disorder.

Psychiatrist Dr. Alistair Murray does not classify that behavior problem as mental illness, but explained that another school of psychiatry does have that opinion, Owen-Flood contended.

The behavior disorder and the added stress of two seperate police investigations caused McFadden to act in an enraged and violent manner when provoked by MacKay.

MacKay told him she would call his employer and the police and then she pushed him so that he fell against the window in her bedroom, shattering it.

"There was the sound of breaking glass — three sharp shrieks as he went for her with the knife, then silence."

The very fact there were 26 stab wounds indicates a "frenzied, maniacal attack" consistant with the symptoms of his behavior disorder. Evidence found at the scene of the crime also indicates a violent struggle, Owen-Flood said.

It is hard to conceive of McFadden premeditating the crime because his employer, his wife and MacKay's boyfriend knew where he was the night of the tragedy.

His wife testified the butcher knife in his possession was borrowed from her in February to replace some tools confiscated by the police.

Owen-Flood said the question of sexual assault was a "speculative leap" by the Crown.

MacKay was nude when she was found because McFadden had removed her clothes after the stabbing and disposed of them. No one knows for sure what she was wearing, he said.

An autopsey showed no signs of sexual assault, the defence counsel pointed out.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the jury the evidence indicates McFadden knew MacKay lived alone and he coldly and cruelly plotted to sexually assault and then kill her when she resisted his advances.

"If you accept that then we have first degree murder," Lang said.

The defence has presumed that provocation by MacKay triggered his violent temper, but that is not so, Land said.

MacKay did not say she was going to call his employer and the police and she did not push him. Instead, McFadden forced her at knifepoint to remove her clothes and then attempted indecent assault.

The window broke not because McFadden fell against it, but because MacKay smashed it in her struggle to excape. It was MacKay's flesh found on the window sill.

She was pulled back into the room and the location of the blood indicates she was stabbed, not by the window as McFadden testified, but six feet away near the closet.

Lang pointed out that Dr. Murray in his testimony stated that if MacKay had not provoked and pushed McFadden there would not be the same degree of aggressive behavior.

McFadden's evidence is untrue and contradicted by fact and items found inside and outside the room.

Dr. Murray testified he does not believe the accused is telling the truth when he says he cannot remember stabbing MacKay.

McFadden had another knife in his tool box and did not need to take a carving knife with him to the job.

After the murder, McFadden returned to the scene and removed and carefully disposed of her clothes, then put her in a boat at his home until he could dispose of the body, Lang said.

Airplane joyride nets one year

A 20-year-old Deep Cove man who stole a plane from Pat Bay airport May 29 and crash landed it near Cowichan Bay was given a one-year jail term Thursday in Victoria provincial court.

Denis Joseph Robert Chiasson, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty June 3 to one count of theft over $200 and 19 counts of mischief causing wilful damage to other aircraft at the airport. Judge Lorne Pearce remanded Chiasson in custody until Thursday so that a pre-sentence report could be prepared.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said Chiasson stole a Piper Cherokee Six, valued at $30,000 and belonging to Flight Centre Victoria charter services, and flew it to a field near Cowichan Bay. Smith said there was three to four hours of fuel in the tanks when Chiasson took the plane and that the crash landing caused an estimated $26,100 damage.

Chiasson apparently damaged the 19 other planes trying to gain entry and the total damage has been estimated at $5,000 by the owners.

Chiasson told Sidney RCMP officers he had been drinking at the Golden Bear Tavern, 2280 Beacon Avenue in Sidney, until about 11 p.m. the night before and somehow wandered over to the airport. There, he tried to start a number of planes.

RCMP said that in one case, if Chiasson had pushed "just one more button," the aircraft would have taken off straight for two other planes which were fully loaded with fuel.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said alcohol and drugs were problems of his client but that Chiasson had beaten the latter. He said Chiasson has said himself he would have difficulty coping in society if released and requested a forestry camp setting and assistance with his alcohol problem. MacKenzie also stated his client had no money whatsoever to make restitution.

The only previous conviction for Chiasson was in New Brunswick on March 19, 1980, when he was given a 30-day jail term for breaking and entering.

"Anyone who did what you did with that plane obviously has some ability," Pearce said to the young man.

But the judge also noted there was approximately $31,000 damages done and said that if Chiasson could have made some kind of restitution, the appropriate sentence would have been six or seven months in jail.

"But there's obviously no hope in this case," Pearce observed.

He handed out the one-year term on the theft charge and recommended that the sentence be served in a forestry camp or at Alouette River where there is a treatment program for alcoholics.

On all the mischief counts, Pearce handed out a concurrent, 30-day sentences and placed Chiasson on a year's probation.

Farm history on show

The Saanich Historians' Artifacts Society will hold its second annual open house from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the 23-acre museum farm.

To reach the farm, turn east from the Pat Bay Highway at the Island View traffic light then north on Lochside Drive.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis will officially open the Willard Michell Building, which is named after the founder of the museum collection, at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The Vancouver Island Model Engineers Society will have steam trains running and carrying passengers on their raised track.

For hungry visitors, there will be homemade bread and butter, home-made jam, peanut butter or honey, as well as ice-cream and cold drinks.

Among several displays will be a Parklands School model of the farm property and a model of the society's proposed Pioneer Memorial Chapel.

The Central Saanich New Horizons' landscaping group will have their lawns and gardens in order, as well as their latest production of native cedar picnic tables.

There is no entrance charge.

First Class On Less Gas!

Subaru 4-Door GL Sedan 5-Speed

Inside and out, Subaru says first class. But the gas mileage says economy and so does the price. This car is designed to save you money. See how now!
But a car built to pinch pennies doesn't have to squeeze its passengers. While other manufacturers have "economized" by cutting down on the amount of car they give you, Subaru gives you more. We've also expanded our line. With a wide choice of models.

IF YOU SMOKE.

In the years since the criticism against smoking first appeared, many people have given up cigarettes. But many more people haven't.

And that's who we'd like to talk to. That even larger group of people who are smokers today.

Chances are you even tried to do something about it—like trying several of those cigarettes that take out everything including the taste.

If you're like a lot of other smokers, you probably went right back to your old brand, and concluded that a good-tasting cigarette for a contemporary smoker has never been invented.

Well, if that's the case, you haven't tried Vantage.

Vantage cuts down substantially on what you may not want, without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavour you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the only cigarette of its kind you can smoke, but it may well be the only one you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

So, if you are a smoker, but would like to cut down on certain things, Vantage is one cigarette you should seriously consider.

Peripetatic Grappelli stopping by for a show

For nine months of each year Stephane tours the world and the other three months he spends at one of his homes in Paris, Cannes, Amstedam or Tunisia. He is continually travelling at a pace that would exhaust a person half his age.

"As a matter of fact," says Stephane, "I don't like living in any one place. I don't like doing the same thing every day. Meeting new people and seeing new places all the time keeps me young, it keeps me interested, and it keeps me healthy.

"I used to smoke a lot but I gave it up in 1970, and now my brain is clearer.

"Practice is good for the fingers but not good for the imagination. Therefore I play very little before a performance. Of course I choose repertoire and make decisions about who should take certain solos and naturally we warm up before a concert. Because improvisation forms the basis of what I do I prefer not to expend all my energy and imagination in practice, or in the rehearsal room. So I usually arrive one hour before I'm supposed to perform, have a little run through with the other guys, take a little drink, some quick conversation, and then I'm on stage.

"It is my hope that on every occasion I play, the music is as fresh for the audience as it is for me.

GRAPPELLI
. . . on the road

"Maurice Chevalier once told me 'You must start very well, finish very well and in the middle it's nobody's business.' But me, I try to do the business in the middle too."

After enjoying two sold-out performances last year, C-FAX 1070 has booked a return engagement featuring Grappelli with the Don Etherington Trio.

This season's engagment will feature one concert only in the Royal Theatre at 8 p.m. next Wednesday, June 25.

Tickets are available now at the Memorial Arena Box Office, Mayfair Mall, Hillside Mall and Hately Park Brandywine.

Music in park Sunday

Leading Vancouver Island musicians and bands — such as Paul Horn, Dolphin in the Sea, Valdy, Sample Stearns Band and Orpheous — will this summer contribute to an impressive array of talent performing in free concerts in Greater Victoria Parks.

These recording artists will headline festivals in the park, but the real stars will be local musicians, who play and compose; Homegrown Musicians.

Building on a successful season last year, and its first concert in the park this year (over 3,000 people came out to the rainy Victoria Day Concert), the fledgling and industrious Homegrown Music Society of B.C. has ambitious plans for at least 10 concerts this summer.

In addition, there will be other free concerts, most of them organized by the Victoria Jazz Society with its Jazz in the Park series.

Homegrown Music Society, a non-profit organization incorporated under the B.C. Society's Act, will break in the summer all afternoon starting at 2 p.m. this Sunday in Beacon Hill Park's Cameron Bandshell.

This twelfth such festival in the society's history is sponsored by Westcoast Savings, CFAX 1070.

Featured will be recording artists Uncle Wiggley's Hot Shoe's Blues Band, and The Sea. This six-hour concert also features Veronica Jones' Nightfaces and the Folklore Centre Open Stage Series, with Childgrove.

"Free Music in the Park is a North American Tradition. Homegrown is attempting to revitalize that tradition, and updating with music to suit all tastes," says organizer Eugene Evans.

"The Festivals and Concerts this summer will range in musical tastes all the way from the classics, with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, through jazz, blues, folk and rock," he said.

Robin Hood set for summer

The Four Seasons Children's Theatre will present Robin Hood in many of Victoria's parks, playgrounds, squares and malls this summer.

Robin Hood's troop will encourage audiences to join them in singing songs, dancing around a maypole and a special archery contest.

The program is free.

Robin Hood will open at the Folkfest in Centennial Square on Friday, June 27 at 4 p.m. The second show will be a special performance at the Canada Day Picnic on July 1 at the Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park at 3 p.m.

Noon performances will be given July 2-4 at the bandshell.

The remainder of the summer shows are scheduled for Market Square, Ship Point, Mayfair Mall, Centennial Square and Eaton's mall.

On Mondays the company will perform in parks and playgrounds for Victoria area recreational departments.

Robin Hood is directed by Sandy Webster, a Victoria director and school teacher, well-known for her Children's Theatre productions which include the highly successful Pied Piper.

This adaption of the Robin Hood legend was written by Peter Mannering, artistic director of Four Seasons, who is currently directing The Wonder Of It All.

Veterans Steve Moysey, Mitch MacKay, Sean Sutherland and Mike Petersen are joined by new members Linda Fehner and Robert Mitchell of the University of Victoria's theatre department, Joan Koch and Gail Penny from the university's music education department, Stephen Harrison from Camsoun College's actor training program, Gordon Thomson from the Victoria Conservatory of Music and David McDonald from Spectrum Senior High School's drama club.

The Robin Hood company is financed by the federal government's summer youth employment program and donations from local merchants, businesses and private individuals.

For further information phone Four Seasons Musical Theatre at 385-3424.

Axe lops off lives

By JOHN GOUDAS

Talk about a thorough spring housecleaning — the powers-that-be have taken an axe, not a broom, to Days of Our Lives.

Old, familiar faces are lopped off, supplanted by eight newcomers. Just sorting out the characters, trying to keep stories straight isn't a breeze for diehard fans. As Susan Seaforth Hayes (Julie on Days) noted recently, "If viewers had been away for six weeks and then tuned in, they wouldn't recognize the show."

About the new squad — well, let's start off with one of the prettiest, a luscious blonde who's been singing most of her life, rather than playing dramatic roles. Gloria Loring was last seen at one of the Oscar presentations warbling nominated tunes, and if you happen to be in Tahoe or Vegas on weekends, Gloria vocalizes a part of Bill Cosby's act.

What's a singer doing on Days playing a sexy troublemaker, and not even getting a bar to hum? The soaper demonstrates an affinity for singers, that's all. Look at Bill Hayes, who plays good old reliable Doug unhappily married to Lee. And singer Kaye Stevens performed in high style over a long stretch as Trish's mom Jeri. So a Days tradition of employing musical types is unfolding.

LORING
. . . sexy troublemaker

Loring may be around for a spell since her character Liz Courtney is a live-wire flirt, sizing up possible game regardless of their marital status.

Here's Gloria's description of Liz: "A dilettante in life, married three times, she's basically quite lonely. At 32, Liz needs to repair a skimpy relationship with her father."

Taking to a new trade to reach a different audience, Loring finds the transition isn't that difficult, not after 300 guest appearances on the variety and talk show circuit. Gloria won't be rattled on camera. Three Loring albums are on the shelf going back to 1968, and the lady is about to record another.

She's writing songs for herself and others with Eric Kaz under the United Artists label ("I think out the lyrics, Eric does both the music and words"), and shares credits with husband Alan Thicke, the Tandem producer, for the themes of Different Strokes and Facts of Life.

TV Mailbag

During the early 1970s my favorite TV show was The Young Lawyers. Can you tell me what happened to its star, Zalman King? I thought he was a good actor, but I haven't seen him for years. One more thing, what's his address? — Lise Morrison, Fargo, N.D.

And I thought I was Zalman King's only fan. Welcome to the club....

I can tell you that since The Young Lawyers failed to put up a very good defence on its own behalf, King made a few less-than-memorable B features, before putting on his producer's hat. He recently completed production on Roadie, a feature film starring Meatloaf, Blondie and Art Carney.

You can probably reach him through his agent, Sylvie Gold at ICM, 8899 Beverly Blvd., Beverly Hill, CA 90048.

This house moved by team of horses

Smart looking brown shingle house on the corner of Rowan Street, next to Doncaster School, looks as if it had been there all its life. Not so.

It originally stood 300 feet north of where it is now, at the corner of Pear Street and Cedar Hill Road. The McMorran family bought it, probably somewhere about 1904, lived in it for a while, and later moved it from its original site with a team of Clydesdales, so that another house, (still standing a few doors up could be built in its place.

The house had been built in 1900 and originally had a small square, very gothic looking closed in porch front and centre. This was taken off, most likely at the same time the house was moved, and replaced with an open porch that ran the length of the house on one side, and was closed in as a sun porch on the south west corner. The McMorrans sold this house they called "Glen Gowan" in 1911. It is presently owned by Mrs. Kathleen Watt.

Buyers, collectors, traders; the gaps and the overlaps

COLLECTIBLES

By JOHN HEARN

A. J. Robins of Delta says, 'I have 1,000 copies of National Geographics from 1930 on, many with Coke ads on the back cover. What might they be worth; who might be interested?'

This is one of those questions which vividly illustrates the gulf which exists between buyers and sellers of collectibles. It is extremely unlikely that a library of this size would be of any interest to anyone other than a dealer. Collectors acquire their missing back numbers of Geographics one at a time and part of the fun is rummaging around flea markets and garage sales for them. They will sometimes buy them from dealers but not with any great enthusiasm. The dealer, therefore, can afford to pay very little for them since he will certainly have to hold them on his shelf for a long time and only sell them singly. Much the same applies to collectors who buy them for the sake of the old Coke ads. They are only looking for specific ads they are missing and if they were buying a job lot they would only expect to pay job-lot prices.

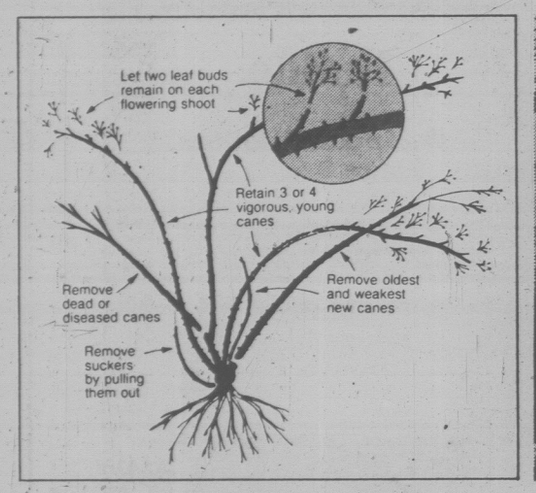

Somewhers in between the dealers and collectors comes that most interesting category of all, the collector-trader. These are the people who have the most fun. Most small collectors like to add items from time to time — Doulton figurines, salts and peppers, souvenir spoons, etc., etc. They do not build big collections and they do not trade. The more serious collectors are specialists in their particular area of interest, they read the literature, join the clubs, go to the shows, visit the museums — and trade with other collectors. For them (and only them) buying and selling are critical areas of their hobby. They are the real experts; they know their product, they are acutely conscious of current prices and, knowing other collectors, they know who to contact if they pick up something of special interest. They not only read the literature, they also write it — articles in collector magazines and specialist's books on particular collectibles are mostly researched and written by the collectors themselves.

Their experience is costly when measured in time spent, miles travelled and the mistakes they make during their early years as collectors. Their pay-off is involvement in a fascinating activity and finally, a self-financing hobby as their trading skills improve and their eye for a bargain becomes ever more sure. These are the people, not just dealers, who are first to arrive when the flea market opens. They can skim 'round in short order, instantly recognizing the underpriced pieces and acquiring them, either for their collection or for trading purposes. The rest of us get there an hour later.

We need not envy them; their ranks are wide open to anyone who wants to take the same amount of trouble and the same risks. To them goes, not just some but all of the credit for the health of today's collecting market. Without them, half the dealers would cease to exist and all those heirlooms which people write hopefully to me about would be valueless. It is the dedicated collectors who create that market and boost those values.

Recently, I was writing about Dave Richardson of Perth who collects empty cigarette packs. If, twenty years from now, we read about him selling one of them for $10,000 we shall be envious and kick ourselves for all the packs we threw away. That is how we shall view it then — but right now he seems to have set himself an absurd task from which no pay-off is possible.

Exactly the same could have been said at one time of those who started collecting Coke trays, canning jars, insulators, and any one of dozens of other 'worthless' items. In retrospect we may think they were smart. They weren't; they were just collectors motivated by enthusiasm for their subject, uncontaminated by any dreams of future profit. That came later.

Air conditioners and what sort of garage door to buy

NOW YOU KNOW
By GEORGE DALGLEISH

Q. We want to install a room air-conditioner in the window. We would like it to cool as much of the house as possible. Do you have any suggestions as to choice of air-conditioner and positioning?

A. First you must have a properly sized unit. Remember that a slightly undersized air-conditioning unit works better than one that is over sized. An over-sized unit will simply chill the air and not dehumidify it. Dehumidification is just as important as cooling since chilled air will not cool the home comfortably. Another prime consideration when installing a room air-conditioner if you want to cool more than one room is the location. For example, if you wanted to cool the bedroom section of your home, don't install the room air-conditioner in a hallway and then direct the air to the bedrooms in one way or another. Room air-conditioners are usually noisy and if they are right above a bed they can cause problems in preventing you from sleeping. If the front of the room air-conditioner has directional draft deflectors the air from the air-conditioner could be directed to the various areas of the floor that you want to cool. However to get good air circulation throughout the entire house, it is necessary to install some assisting fans to move the air from one room to another. Remember that you can't move the air into a room unless air is also coming out. So the use of window fans, exhausting air from the house is a good way to get the cool air into that room. Also you may want to run your furnace fan continually in order to circulate the air from one part of the house to the other. This often will enable you to cool an entire house if you have a large enough unit and a small house. Large fans simply set on the floor in hallways or at doorways can be used to deflect air into other areas of the home. I used to live in a home where we cooled the entire main floor of a two-storey house from a room air-conditioner permanently installed in a wall at the top of the stairs. A large twenty-inch fan on slow sped was enough to direct the cool air down the stairwell and to the main floor of the house. Then as evening came the fan was simply moved over to direct the cool air into the bedrooms. It was a bit of work, but nevertheless it was well worth it on hot nights. Remember that a room air-conditioner cannot do the cooling job that a central air-conditioner can do. But most people buy room air-conditioners because of economics. But room air-conditioners can do a good job of cooling your home if you are able to circulate the cold air properly.

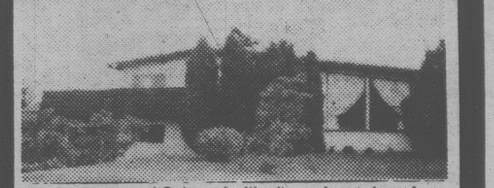

Q. We have just built a garage and are at a loss as to what type of garage door to install. Should we install a wood door or a metal door?

A. That depends. A wood door has more insulating qualitites than a metal door. However, if your garage isn't insulated and isn't heated then it doesn't make that much difference. But a good quality wood door will last much longer than an economical metal door. Metal doors can be very easily bent out of square, which will cause difficulty in opening and closing. However, if you want to insulate your door further, a one-piece metal door is easier to insulate than a sectional wood door. A good amount of insulation can be attached to metal doors. Insulation such as rigid polystyrene can be attached with small bolts going right through the door and the insulation. Wood sectional doors have the advantage of adding class to your garage. This is especially important if your garage is attached to the house. A wood door can be painted a number of different colors, usually the main color of your home and the color of the trim. Also decorations can be painted onto door panels to add to the attractiveness of the door. Remember that a metal door only has a prime coat of paint on it and it needs a proper metal paint. So if you buy a metal door from a building supply dealer and find that it is slightly scratched, don't worry about it because that's only the prime coat anyway. If you are heating your garage a wood door has the advantage of not frosting up when it is cold outside and humidity is produced by the car. So when choosing a garage door make sure that you choose a good quality one.

You also might want to consider a radio controlled garage door opener. When it is really raining out or when there is a snow storm, there is nothing more convenient than simply pushing a button in your car to open or close your garage door.

Easy-to-build patio lounger wheels along to follow sun

YOU CAN MAKE IT!

By Steve Ellington

There's nothing like a pleasant conversation, a good book or an afternoon of day-dreaming set to the soft background of rustling leaves and singing birds.

These induce tranquility, nature's best remedy.

The patio lounger shown here will flatter any outdoor living room. The wheels make it easy to follow the sun wherever it might be. A table between the two seats supports a colorful umbrella to give you shade on a hot day. And it's also handy for serving cool drinks, lunches or for playing cards and checkers.

The entire lounger is made of standard stock wood available at all lumber yards. The pads are purchased from your neighborhood dealer. The full-size pattern has lots of easy-to-follow illustrations to make the building easy. You simply trace the pattern on wood, then saw it out and assemble . . . very simple.

To obtain the full-size Patio Lounger Pattern No. 255, send $2.50 (please add fifty cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money to:
U-Bild Pattern Department, Box 160, Cote St. Luc, Montreal Quebec. H4V 2Y3.

Panel walls yourself and save on labor

MONTREAL, May 15, 1980 — "More and more families are putting up wall panelling themselves," says wall panelling expert, Bill MacDonald of Hunter Douglas Canada Limited. MacDonald travels throughout Europe, North and South America and the Carribean giving demonstrations on the subject of panelling.

"Today's plywood sheets are light, easy to cut and families are saving 50% of the labor costs by installing it themselves," says MacDonald. "The 13-pound plywood sheet can be installed even by housewives with the help of a teenager and some simple tricks that produce wonderful results."

"No special care is needed," says MacDonald, "for wall panelling is no longer made of material that will warp easily. Luxaply panels, for example, are made of Lauan plywood which resists humidity and temperature extremes that can expand and contrat the wood. This means that you can be sure the panel is straight when you begin to work; a straight panel and straight lines are the key to a professional looking job," he added.

A simple plumb-line, bought at any hardware store, can insure that your panels are evenly aligned. In addition, do-it-yourselfers will need a measuring tape, utility knife, a saw, and either colored nails, panel stables or adhesive.

According to MacDonald, installing panelling is faster than putting up wall paper or painting. Even an inexperienced person can panel an 8-foot by 12-foot room in a morning and without a mess.

Tricks to note

Some of the tricks MacDonald finds helpful involves molding. "Moldings hide errors," he says, "while accenting the panles to great advantage. They also cover cuts and corners, windows, doors and, of course, should be used at the tops and bottoms of panels."

"Electrical boxes and switches," he emphasized, "should be moved forward from the wall ⅛-inch. To prepare the panel to be placed over these outlets, use carbon paper or calk the back of the panel — this will produce an outline to cut around."

Cuts don't have to be perfect; a utility knife will do for most cuts. You can also score the plywood with the knife and snap it back to produce a clean cut. You will, however, need a saw for doors. It's really not a messy job — no glue, no paint and not much saw dust. Luxaply wall panels are available at dealers carrying Hunter Douglas building supplies.

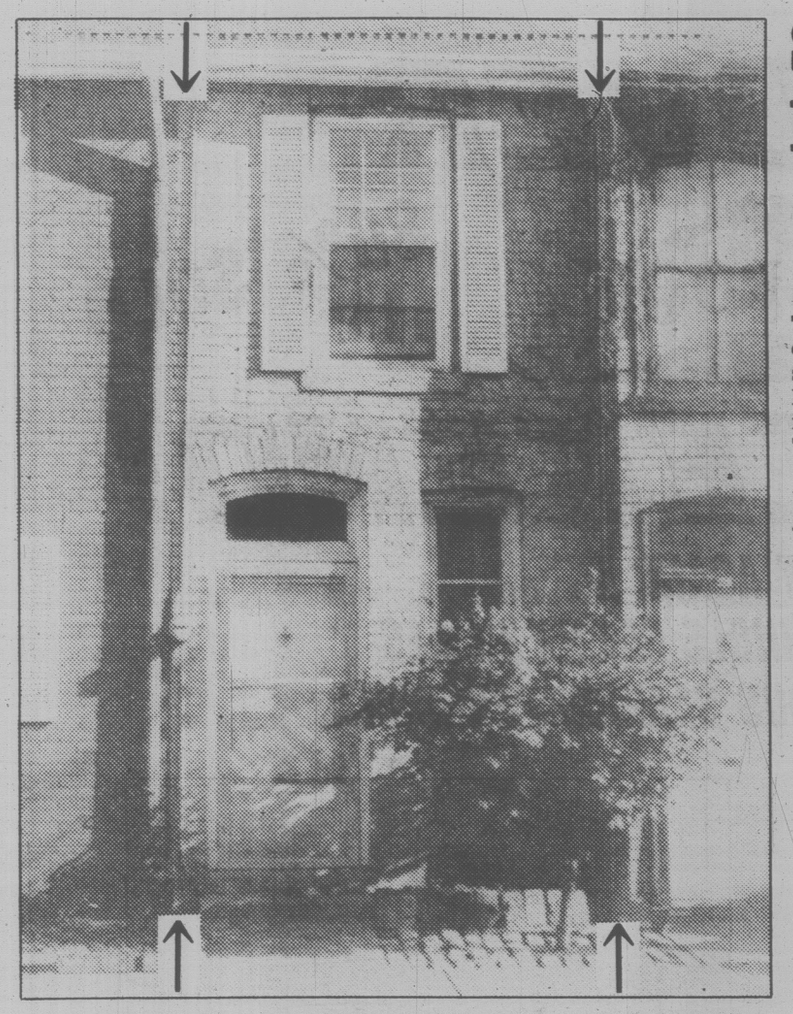

Southgate Street

Southgate, a commission merchant with an office on Wharf Street, helped to organize Victoria's first fire department.

He was a member of the legislature, who fought for service between Victoria and San Francisco.

On a trip to England in 1867 he met Hon. H. D. Lascelles, who had been captain of the gunboat Forward stationed at Esquimalt, and persuaded Lascelles to return to Victoria. In 1869 the two men built the brick building at the corner of Fort and Government Streets, now the CPR office.

So....you think your house is too small?

Tiniest house in Toronto is not even nine feet wide

TORONTO (CP) — The ceilings are a little crooked and the floors slope slightly but Eunice Huff doesn't mind living in the tiniest house in Toronto.

The house in the old village of Yorkville is just 2½ metres wide and 12 metres deep (8½ feet by 40 feet).

"People are quite astounded when they learn that I'm living in such a tiny house," said Ms. Huff, a fashion advertising manager in a downtown department store. "Anybody who vaguely knows me wants to see it — it's a curiosity."

She said that the floors slope downwards and slightly towards the east at the back so "I have to push the water out of the bathtub."

"It was a little startling at first but I've gotten used to it. The basement is so small that I can't get my bicycle out without removing the handlebar."

Yorkville existed for 30 years on the northern outskirts of the city and was annexed to Toronto in 1883, but it never had any large or pretentious homes.

It was a neighborhood of shopkeepers and merchants, hardworking gentle folk, many of whom worked in the city and commuted back and forth on the railway that ran down Yonge Street to the market.

Ms. Huff's house looks old on the outside but inside it's a contemporary modern dwelling. It was renovated before she bought it for $50,000 and moved in 2½ years ago.

The interior walls are painted in a vanilla tone which makes the rooms seem larger than they are.

The ceilings are high — three metres compared to today's average of two metres — and the windows are tall and slender.

The kitchen is located right inside the front door where once there was a parlor. The living room — 2½ metres by five metres — has bare, light hardwood floors which open up the area.

The only room in the house that Ms. Huff changed was the upstairs bedroom, which is 2½ metres by four metres. Originally painted vanilla, she redecorated it in bright yellow.

Ms. Huff said that it may well be Toronto's smallest house but it's still a good investment. She guesses it's worth $62,000 to $68,000 today.
